Annual trek to Kansas City begins

LANCASTER, Pa. - Beginning this Saturday, many FFA chapters across the state and nation will be making an annual trek to the 49th national FFA convention to be held in Kansas City from Nov. 9-12. For many of those attending, the trip will be a much deserved reward for hard work and achievements throughout the years. For others, the pilgrimage will mean competition and awards.

Several Lancaster Countians are taking part in the convention.

Lynn Ray Groff, 211 S. State St., Ephrata, a member of the Grassland Chapter, is one of four regional star agribusinessmen who were chosen by the Board of Directors to be eligible for the Star Agribusinessman of America award. A committee of judges including leaders in business, agriculture, and education will evaluate Groff's work.

Several other youths throughout Lancaster County will be receiving their American Farmer degrees. They are Clifford L. Charles, Lancaster R2, from the Manor Chapter; Robin Ginder, Denver R2, from the Cloister Chapter; Russel L. Kline, Denver R3 from the Cloister Chapter; and Delmar Lee Weaver, New Holland R1, from the Grassland Chapter.

The American Farmer degree is the highest degree presented by the National FFA organization, and the members were nominated for the degree by the Pennsylvania FFA Association. The nomination was approved at a recent meeting of the National Board of Directors in Alexandria, Va. The degree is highly coveted because it is presented to approximately one member in 700 of the total 500,385 FFA membership.

Each American Farmer Degree recipient will be presented a gold key and certificate by the National FFA organization.

To qualify for the American Farmer Degree, FFA members must have advanced through a system of degrees unique to the FFA organization. FFA members begin as Greenhands and after one year of membership may be advanced by the local chapter to the degree of "Chapter Farmer". The third degree, that of "State Farmer," is presented by the State FFA Association to two per cent of the state's FFA membership in any one year. Only students who have earned the State Farmer Degree are eligible for the American Farmer Degree.

Randy Ranck, Quarryville, president of the Pennsylvania FFA Association, and a member of the Solanco FFA, will also be attending the convention, representing Pennsylvania as an official delegate. Ranck is one of two such delegates who will be a part of a 121 FFA member delegation that will conduct the business of the National FFA organization during the business sessions at the convention.

In addition, Ranck will serve as co-chairman of the FFA calendar committee which will review the means of obtaining better public relations for Vo-Ag and FFA.

Tuesday afternoon, the delegates will be together for the first time on the convention floor for the first official business session which will be chaired by the National FFA president, Bobby Tucker, of Mineola, Tex.

For the delegates, the business of the national organization will conclude at noon on Friday with the election of the six national FFA officers.

Lancaster County will also have two other state officers attending the convention. Ruby Ginder and Earl Geib, of Manheim FFA, will attend

Milk processing plant okayed

By JOYCE BUPP
York County Correspondent

NEW PARK, Pa. - Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers of Baltimore has announced tentative plans to build a manufacturing plant jointly with Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative, Southampton, Pa.

The proposed construction plan was presented to MCMP members at the District 7 meeting, October 26, at Centre Presbyterian Church, here. The dinner was the first of the cooperative's series of meetings held each Fall in MCMP's 12 districts to acquaint members with the overall operating status of the business.

President Herbert Wessel, Hampstead, Md., introduced the proposal and explained that the Board has given its approval to begin studies on the cost and feasibility of the move.

The facility would be a manufacturing plant, with the ability to utilize excess production during peak periods for the manufacture of whole milk powder, butter, skim milk powder and other dried milk products. The cooperative is currently experiencing difficulty finding plants that will take their milk shipments on weekends and holiday periods.

"If we had a manufacturing plant today, we could fill it tomorrow," said Ralph Strock, manager of MCMP. Strock indicated that more "homes" are needed for a rapidly climbing production level; and he cited the problem of most Class II users being relatively far away from production areas.

York farm women give $6000 to 4-H

YORK. Pa. - The York County Society of Farm Women on Thursday donated $6000 to their County 4-H Center. raising their total donation over the last several years to $21,000.

The check for $6000 was presented to Mrs. Marcy Seckman, representing the York County Cooperative Extension Service, during the Farm Women Society's annual county meeting. The York County Society consists of 33 groups.

Money for the donation was raised through two primary projects, both of which were chaired by Mrs. Harold Gross of Manchester. A quilting project, held earlier this year, brought in funds totaling $2210. In addition gifts amounting to $175 were given by groups which did not make quilts. Of the 12 quilts made, one reportedly commanded a price of $300. They were sold this Fall during the "Peachilicious Weekend," held annually at Maple Lawn Farms, Gatchellville.

The remainder of the $6000 was earned through the sale of the York County Farm Women's cookbook. Originally published three years ago, the culinary manual had to be printed a second time to meet the demand. The second printing is just about sold out too, it was reported.

Of the $15,000 given to the 4-H Center previously, $7000 went for building and equipping the kitchen. The $6000 presented to the Center on Thursday are earmarked for similar purposes.

This DEKALB Sex Sal record was compiled by Henry U. Stoltzfus of R. D. No. 2, Honeybrook, PA It was impressive enough to encourage him to convert his 3000 capacity floor house to a triple-decked, 6800 bird, cage operation. Henry says, "I'm retailing more and more of my own eggs and the abundance of Grade A large and extra large eggs I get from the Sex Sal is what I need."

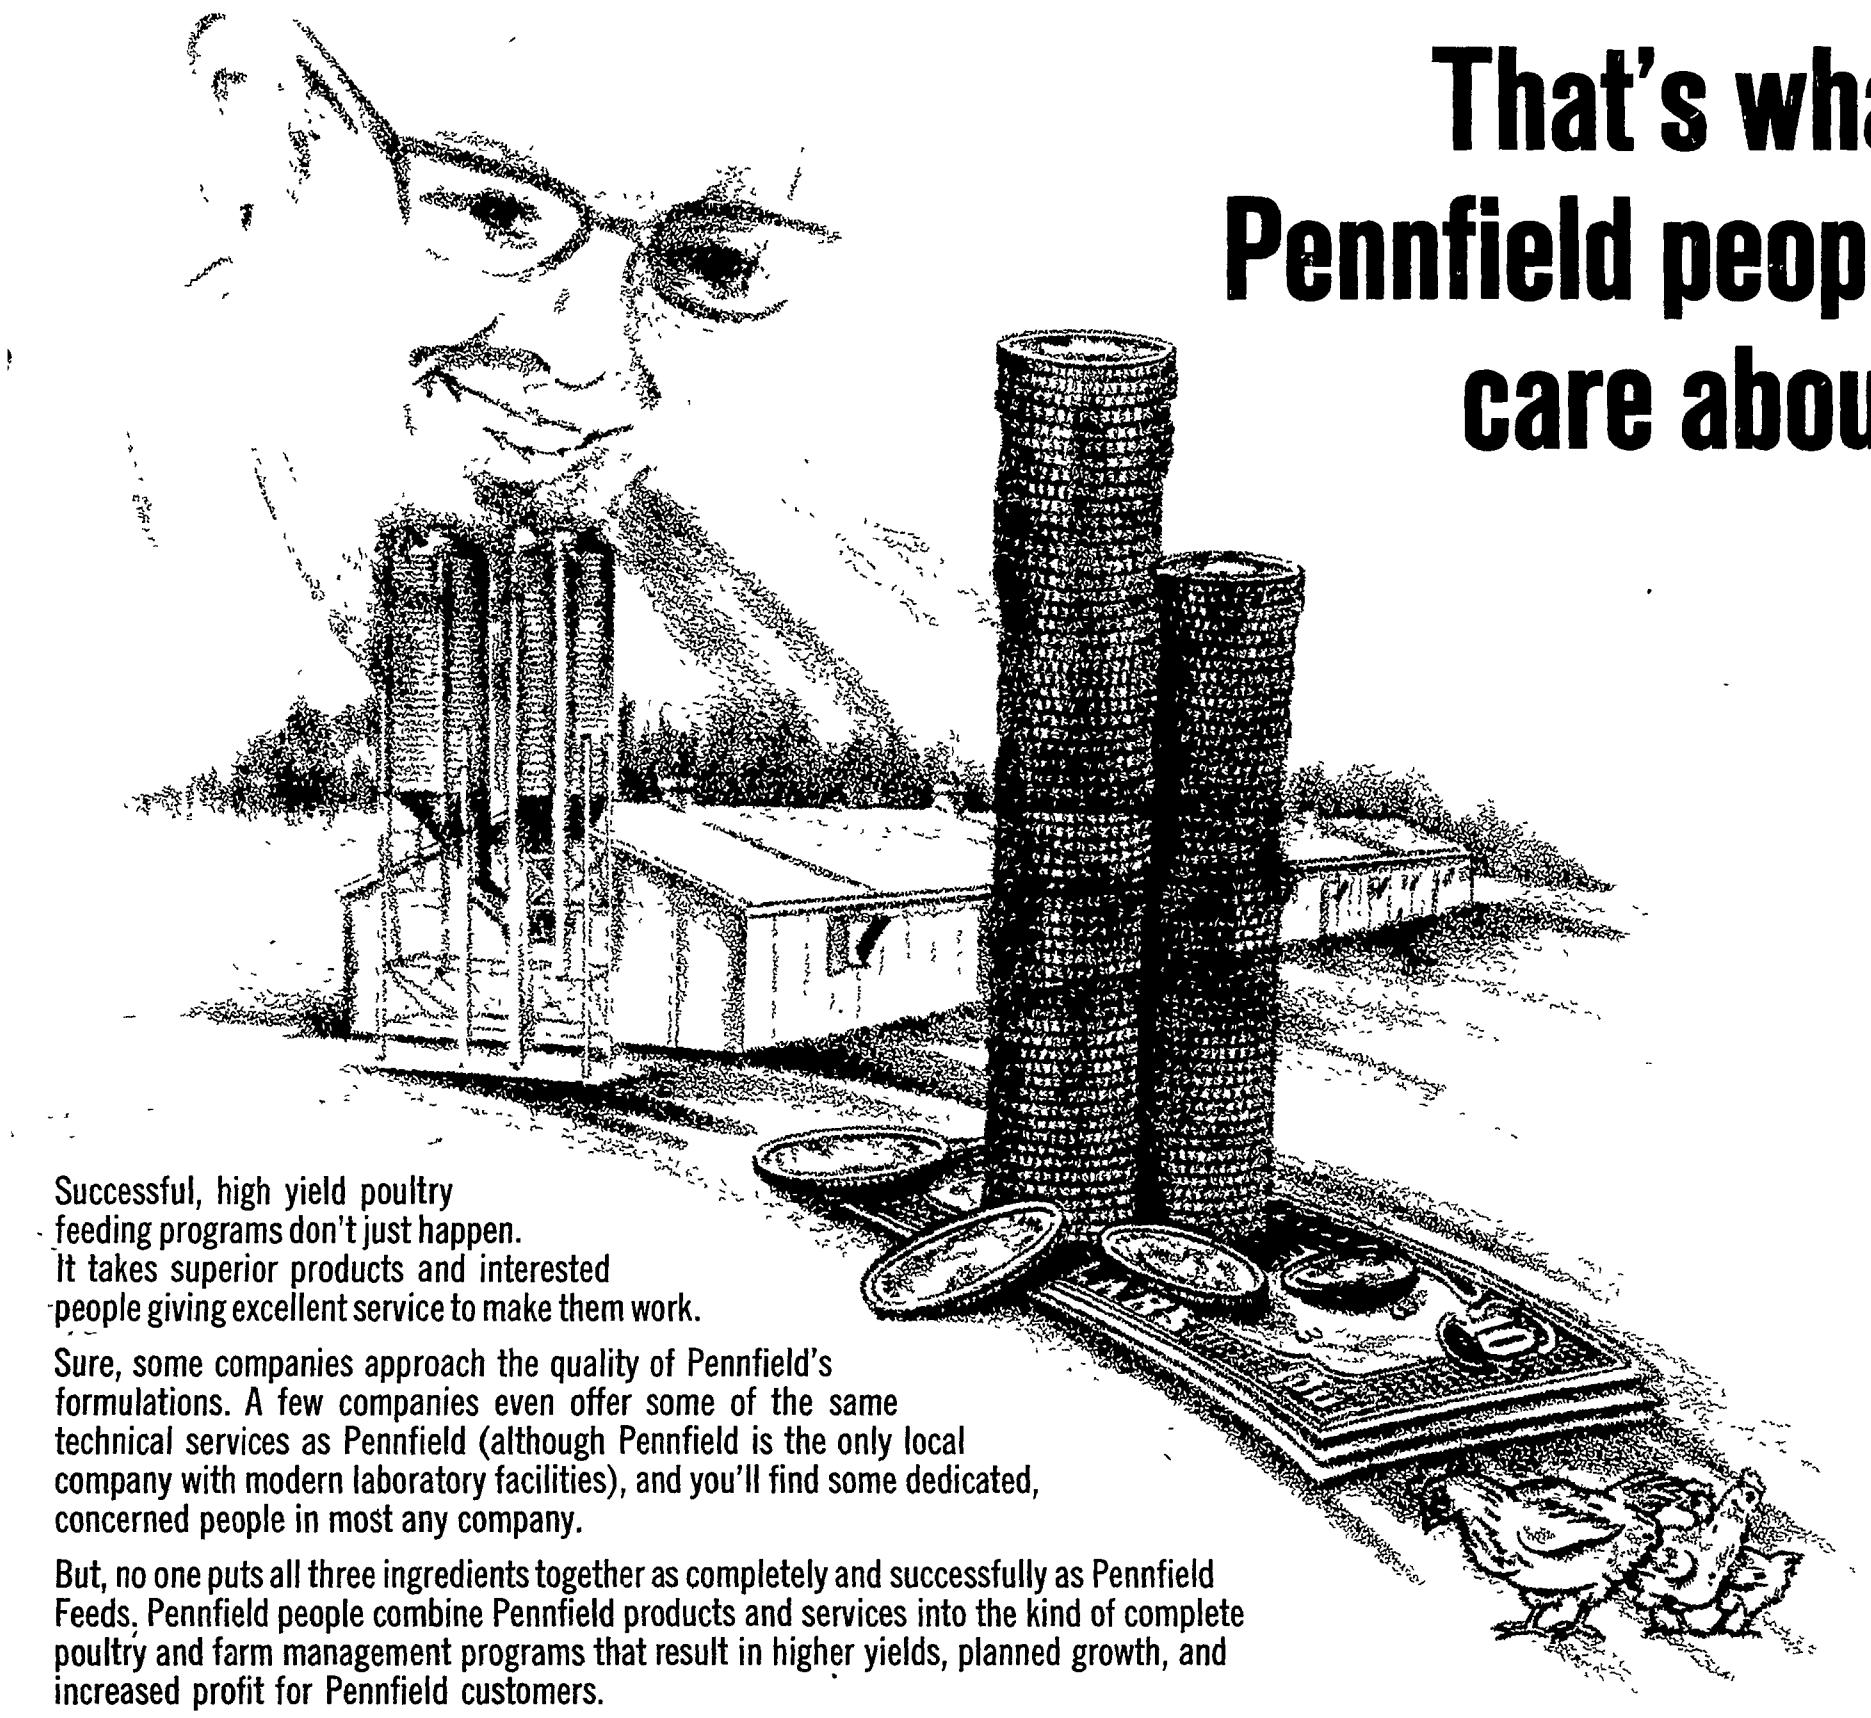
Your POULTRY PRODUCTIVITY, your PROFITABILITY.



That's what Pennfield people care about.

Successful, high yield poultry feeding programs don't just happen. It takes superior products and interested people giving excellent service to make them work.

Sure, some companies approach the quality of Pennfield's formulations. A few companies even offer some of the same technical services as Pennfield (although Pennfield is the only local company with modern laboratory facilities), and you'll find some dedicated, concerned people in most any company.

But, no one puts all three ingredients together as completely and successfully as Pennfield Feeds. Pennfield people combine Pennfield products and services into the kind of complete poultry and farm management programs that result in higher yields, planned growth, and increased profit for Pennfield customers.

Chemists, nutritionists, production personnel, veterinarians, computer technicians, business and marketing analysts, deliverymen, quality control specialists, financial experts, and more . . . led by your Pennfield Area Manager who can put them all together to develop and service a customized, profit-oriented program for you. These are Pennfield people. And, Pennfield people make Pennfield Feeds a better buy.

Declare Your Independence Guarantee Your Market

We at Producers Pride aren't trying to start any revolutions. But if you're an independent egg producer—or if you'd like to be—we can help you get the kind of freedom you want without jeopardizing your income.

Producers Pride is a cooperative. It's owned and controlled entirely by producers who want a voice in how their eggs are marketed. We've been in business since 1932. For over 34 years, Producers Pride members have been getting paid every week for their previous week's egg shipments. We have never, ever missed a week.

When you join Producers Pride, you become part owner of the business. And since we're not a giant co-op, your voice as an owner is important.

You'll be joining a small organization—fewer than 200 producers—but we have the volume to service a growing market. And our markets are growing, thanks to the dedicated efforts of a small but hard-working and very capable staff.

We are your friends and neighbors in the egg business. We enjoy being independent, and we enjoy having a guaranteed market for our eggs.

This is the year for independence, and Producers Pride is looking for a few more good members. If you'd like more information, put your John Hancock on the coupon below and mail it.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

NOV. 8-14. 1976

Harvest is in and barns are tight.

Mend broken windows now Charles deGaulle died Nov 9, 1970 Third quarter of the moon Nov 14 Henry Winston gave the Hope Diamond to Smithsonian Nov 8, 1958 Average length of days for the week, 9 hours, 55 minutes All of northeast blacked out by massive power failure Nov 9, 1965 Tis bias or grudge makes some men misjudge

Ask the Old Farmer: Is there any truth in the story that a bushy tail on squirrels indicates a cold winter ahead, and a scrawny tail, a mild winter? D E L, Gloucester, Mass

Old timers in our section never could agree on this Some of them claimed that if the winter was to be mild the critters clawed out some of their fur because it would be too hot Others swore that cold weather and the approach of same livened up the squirrels, and they did so much running and fighting that they whipped the fur off their tails

Home Hints: To keep the bottom crust of fruit and custard pies from getting soggy, brush the crust with a slightly beaten egg white and put it into the oven for five minutes before pouring in the filling

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECASTS

New England: Early week starts with Indian summer, Wednesday through the end of week, cold and light flurries.

Greater New York-New Jersey: Clear, sunny and warm to start; turning cold and rainy Tuesday through week's end

Middle Atlantic Coastal: Rainy and raw at week's start, continuing cold throughout the week

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Beginning cloudy and warm with heavy rain on the coast on Tuesday, end of the week brings cold, clouds and frost

Upstate N.Y. - Toronto & Montreal: Cloudy, cold with snow in the west, cold and snow Thursday through week's end

WEEKLY - 51 - Cattle - Compared with the previous weeks close -

Prices on Slaughter Steers and Heifers were mostly 50 cents lower through mid-week, as compared late the previous week but limited late sales near steady. Cows 50-1.00 lower and Bulls weak to 1.00 lower.

FOUR DAY RECIPTS 14,000 as compared 13,900 previous week and 15,100 a year ago. Fed cattle prices were forced downward on a Monday run of 7000 head in reflection of lowered carcass quotations and virtually no recovery was made until Thursday despite curtailed marketings. Slaughter under Federal inspection was moderately decreased as many plants reduced slaughter quotas because of poor movement of the finished product and the unfavorable ratio between carcass realizations and current live prices. Most interests were not particulary aggressive and were competitive only for minimum requirements. The Monday run included a Liberal percentage Choice Steers and Heifers but the supply thereafter was predominantly good to average-choice. Slaughter Steers made up approximately 29 per cent of the weeks total and Heifers 26 per cent cows comprised 7 per cent and feeders 36 per cent.

The businessman's bird is back!

Between 1972 and 1973 an old friend of the commercial egg producer quietly slipped from view. Most producers call her the best feathered friend they ever had. They've missed the "old" B-300 sorely in the last few years. And they've told us so.

When the "old" B-300 - - we call her the B-300V - - retired from Random Sample Testing in 1973, she had an unmatched record of consistent performance. More importantly, she was a legend in her time. . .in the field. . .in your poultry house. She made businessmen out of thousands of poultrymen. She was the standard to which competitive strains compared their performance.

The B-300V was nearly perfect for the times. But we knew that times were changing. We knew that tomorrow's top layer had to have a stronger eggshell. We were committed to making the B-300V tomorrow's top layer. Tomorrow is here.

For the past 5 years, the B-300V has been in a concentrated program of eggshell improvement. It has paid off in results. . .without sacrificing the performance that made her your top choice in the "good old days."

Dust off your old records and take another look. Better yet, ask your Babcock distributor for his latest performance data on the B-300V.

Try a flock. Compare it to the best of your present stocks. We know you're going to be pleasantly surprised.

The businessman's bird is back. . .and better than ever before. The B-300V.

The Babcock B-300V

Consistency:
The only layer to place first or second (IOFCC) in every USDA 2 - year combined Random Sample Summary between 1966 and 1973, her last year of entry.

Performance:
Legendary 90 % plus peaks, and consistent, top egg production throughout the laying period.

Efficiency:
The top average feed converter in the USDA 2 - year combined Random Sample Summaries of any bird entered for more than 2 consecutive years between 1966 and 1973. (With the exception of another Babcock strain entered between 1970 and 1973.)

Improvement:
Measured 1976 eggshell crushing strength improvements of 15 % in early lay (36 weeks) and 30.8 % in late lay (68 weeks). B - 300V's hatched in 1977 will have stronger shells in late lay than they did in early lay in 1972.

Reliability:
The B - 300V is a time - tested performer on your farm, under the real - life conditions you face day - in and day - out. That's how she became the "businessman's bird". . .the first choice of producers wherever eggs are produced at a profit!

Happiness is . . .

Lancaster Farming and its editor were recently given a "feather" for their caps when a reader wrote: "Dear Editor Krieg -

"I was sent a gift subscription to Lancaster Farming by a friend a few years ago and have continued my subscription ever since. I enjoy it very much, as it helps me in my position as a member of our Matanuska-Susitna Borough Planning and Zoning Commission. I personally feel that your editorials alone are worth the subscription rate. They are very inspirational and seem to get to the heart of the problem with very few words."

Further down in the letter it was noted that one of Krieg's editorials and an editorial cartoon on OSHA were used by the gentleman to make a point with state and federal legislators.

Mr. Robert Risley, from Palmer, Alaska, sent the letter. Lancaster Farming and its editor thank him publically for this very fine compliment.

Bull story

Several weeks ago the Lancaster County Farmers' Association put on a big promotional effort at the Park City shopping mall, Lancaster. One of the highlights of a few dairymen there was the reaction of a lady proprietor whose store wasn't far from the dairy display. Being an observant woman, she took notice that a Holstein was bigger than the Guernsey which had been on display the day before. Commenting to the dairymen about it, she presumed that the bigger cow must have been a bull.

"All the news that's unimportant, but still interesting."

Slim pickins

There's a rumor going around that cattle prices are so bad that one partnership of brothers isn't making money even when one rustles cattle and the other swipes feed.

Powerful dryer

A report coming out of Lake Crystal, Minn., where the big FARMFEST '76 was held, says that the whole place turned into a sea of mud for much of the proceedings due to badly needed rains finally reaching the parched area. While the rains were indeed welcome to the area's farmers, they did make the fest a bit uncomfortable at times.

A number of dignitaries were on hand to make speeches, including a cabinet officer and a senator.

After the big rain fell, the cabinet officer announced: "Farmfest will dry out in a half hour if the senator is a speaker."

Peanut stories

When the editor of this newspaper walked into his office on Wednesday morning, his desk was full with the usual amount of papers, pictures, pamphlets, etc. Scattered all over the top of that were scores of peanuts. They were put there by an employee who had promised to do the deed if Krieg's candidate lost the election.

Another employee noted that the recent election proves a fellow can work for peanuts and still get to be president.

On the same subject, a young farmer near Denver said his outlook on agriculture was good until Wednesday morning.

Support needed

The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association has an interesting proposal on its agenda. They're thinking about notifying the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation to use more macadam and less shovels when fixing potholes. The group of farmers, like most anyone else, has noticed that a lot of the shovels are being used to lean on and they're getting tired of it. A legislator who was present at the meeting told the farmers that unions have made it mandatory to send road crews out in complete units. In other words, if you've got five in a crew, and you need six, you'll automatically get 10.

Hats off to the ladies!!

Farmers' wives deserve an awful lot of credit for the many things they do. Not only do they do the housework and raise a family, they're also busy helping with the chores and bill paying.

One would think that this would saturate anyone's schedule. And probably it does.

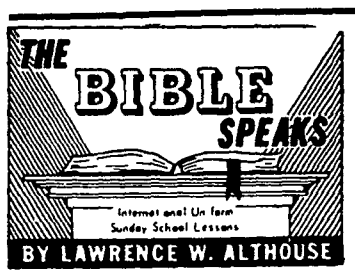
EDITORIAL COMMENTS

BY DIETER KRIEG, EDITOR

Nevertheless, farm women find or create time to do even more than the above. For example, it was the ladies who organized the fabulous promotion at Lancaster's Park City shopping mall last month. It was a huge undertaking, and they deserve a lot of credit for having had the ambition to follow through. Similar events have taken place or are being planned elsewhere. Again, it's the ladies who are doing much of the planning.

This past Thursday the Farm Women Society of York County donated $6000 to their 4-H organization. All told, they've presented that particular program with over $20,000.

That, too, is quite an undertaking and quite an accomplishment. Congratulations to all involved!



TO BE GOD'S COUNSELOR

Lesson for November 7, 1976

Background Scripture:
Romans 10:1-13;11.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 42:5-9.

Paul's rhetorical question sounds absurd:

"For who has known the mind of the Lord, or who has been his counselor?" (Romans 11:34)

But it isn't!

The fact is that lots of people pose as and attempt to be God's "counselor." Not quite satisfied with God's rule of the universe or his revelation, they are constantly at work "improving" upon it, helping God with his implied "communications gap."

Of course, these people would hardly think of themselves in that role, in fact they would be horrified and scandalized if someone were to suggest that they were giving the impression of acting as God's "counselors"! But being ignorant of the significance of their actions and attitudes does not make them one bit less significant. Aware or unaware, it is blasphemy to try to improve upon one's Creator!

Unsearchable and inscrutable

It is not that we do not have sufficient warning. All through the Bible (as well as in other sacred writings) we have one warning after another of the danger of trying to ursurp God's role. In Romans, for example, Paul cries;

"O the depth of the riches and wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgements and how inscrutable his ways!" (11:13).

Here is a tacit admission that God's wisdom, knowledge, judgements, and ways are often far beyond our feeble comporehension. What this calls for from man is a deep sense of humility. The more we grow in our understanding of God, the more firm is our relationship with Him, the more humble we should be in the face of these awesome realities, the less ready we should be to substitute the ways and judgements of the creatures for those of the Creator.

"Everyone"?

Yet, despite all these affirmations and warnings, "religious" people have often attempted to "ascend into heaven" and even "descend into the abyss" to find the revelation that will bring them closer to God and make them more privy to his secrets. And with these "secrets" clutched tightly in their hands, they have assumed a stance, not of humility and awe, but of arrogance. By virture of what they now "possess," they see themselves standing higher than other men. Even if they grudgingly acknowledge that there may be something to your path, they will gather their skirts closely to themselves and shrink from all others lest the purity of their revelation be adulterated by contact with yours.

How distressing then when Paul asserts that in the grace of God "there is no distinction between Jew or Greek" (or between Protestant and Catholic, etc.) Even worse is Paul's declaration that "the same Lord is Lord of all and bestows his riches upon all who call upon him" (10:12). Everyone, Paul? Yes, says Paul, "everyone" (10:13).

Thank God we are not His counselors!

TO UTILIZE CORN STALKS

Many fields of corn have been picked and the rank fodder growth is on the ground. This fringe benefit from a real good corn crop may have two additional uses on livestock farms. First, the corn stalks and leaves have some fertilizer and organic matter value when incorporated into the soil; rotted crop waste is a good souce of organic matter. Secondly, fodder has a potential bedding value in livestock barns and feedlots. Shredded corn fodder has real good water absorption powers and can be very useful in keeping livestock clean and warmer during the winter months. The fodder can be shredded and when allowed to dry for several days, it can be baled or brought into the barn loose. Bedding materials are very expensive and corn growers are urged to give some attention to the use of the shredded corn fodder to reduce the amount of straw needed.

Garden Spot delights 109 foreigners

By DIETER KRIEG

BIRD-IN-HAND, Pa. - Three busloads of foreigners from 32 different countries had a pleasant visit to Lancaster County recently, according to comments heard here at the Plain and Fancy Farm Dining Room.

The visitors were highly impressed with the neatness of the area's farms and fertile farmland. Also high on the list of interests were the Amish people and their farming methods.

"They're very enthused about being in this area, in comparison to other areas they've visited," said Doug Rundle, area market manager for Shaver Poultry Farms. Speaking on behalf of the group, as well as himself, Rundle announced that Lancaster County has the best in the United States. He was referrring to outstanding farms, particularly poultry farms, which he and his guests were most interested in.

The 109 foreigners found themselves in Lancaster County as an offshoot of a world-wide poultry conference held earlier in Toronto, Canada. The meeting, as well as the tour, was sponsored by the Shaver Company, which distributes egg and broiler type poultry chicks to 87 countries around the world. Deliveries anywhere are made within 24 hours from the closest of any of their six hatcheries.

Among the farms visited by the group in Lancater County were Pennfield Farms and Glenn Esbenshade's. Rundle described these operations and others as "quality type operations . . . the better ones around in the U.S." Pennfield's widely known Hendrik Wentik, who serves on national poultry organizations, escorted the party for a part of their visit to the area. All of the visitors were directly affiliated with the Shaver Company, which is headquartered in Cambridge, Ontario. Its representative in the eastern United States, Jay Greider, Mount Joy, was in charge of "local programming."

While in the area the visitors left behind some information regarding the poultry industry in their home countries.

The cholesterol issue came to mind and it was pointed out that nowhere is it of as much concern as in the United States. One gentleman at this reporter's table commented: "Other countries haven't reached the degree of over-eating and laziness as I guess we have in North America." Cholesterol is emerging as an issue in the more advanced European nations, but it's practically a dead subject in other portions of the globe.

Basic feeding and handling of poultry doesn't differ much throughout the world, especially among the more advanced states, it was learned. There are some differences in housing, marketing, and preparation, depending on climatic regions, cultural differences, and economic circumstances.

Almost every chicken sold in the United States for eating is government inspected. Many foreign countries do not have such rigid control, but some, like The Netherlands, have even more thorough inspections.

The Dutch poultry industry is reportedly very advanced, although not necessarily very large in every instance. The biggest broiler operation, for example, has 500,000 birds, with 12,000 being pegged as an average figure.

A & C hires Lardner

NEW HOLLAND, Pa. - Mr. Adams S. Horst, Jr., president of A & C Equipment Company, here has announced the appointment of Michael J. Lardner as general manager of the company.

Founded 16 years ago, A & C Equipment Company sells and services material handling equipment and commercial turf equipment. A & C Equipment specializes in skid steer and articulated loaders, industrial high-lifts, excavating equipment, log and lumber handling equipment and dual hydrostatic mowers.

Lardner was most recently the regional sales manager for the DeWalt Division of the Black and Decker Manufacturing Company in Lancaster. He has held other marketing and sales positions with Black and Decker in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Denver, Colorado, and Kansas City, Missouri.

Rough & Tumble holds banquet

BLUE BALL, Pa. - Approximately 270 members attended the 16th annual membership banquet held by the Rough and Tumble Engineer Historical Association at the Blue Ball Fire Hall last month.

The following officers were elected for 1976-77: President, Amos B. Stauffer; first vice president, Otis A. Astle; second vice president, Harry K. Frey, Jr.; secretary, Mrs. Patricia L. Frey; treasurer, Scott Lefever; chaplin, Paul M. Nolt; and curator, C. Daniel Brubaker, outgoing president.

The organization reduced the number of directors from 30 to 12. Elected were Lewis Frantz, Ira Hall, Walter Harris, Robert Hartzel, Raymond Herr, Sam Kreible, A. D. Mast, R. J. Montgomery, John Railing, Paul Seachrist, Paul Stoltzfus and Everett Young.

Daniel Brubaker, president for the past 12 years, was given a standing ovation as he left office, for "the fine work and improvements made to the museum during his reign."

He was named to the newly-created position of curator of the museum.

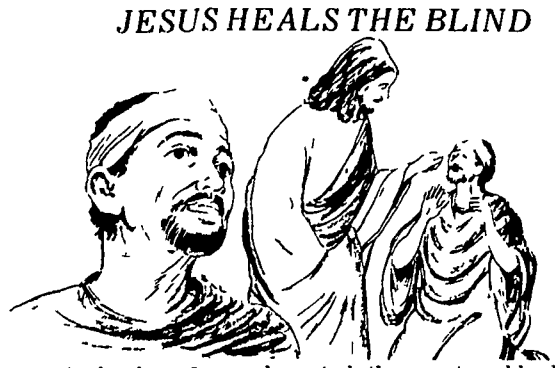
Ed Margerum, chairman of the by-laws committee, explained a new set of by-laws and amendments, the first changes since the organization was founded some 30 years ago. The revised by-laws were adopted.

Margerum also gave a report on the success of the Bicentennial program held in July, in which the museum hosted the wagon train on its way to Valley Forge. More than 3,000 people attended the programs, which included 56 covered wagons.

Everett Young, chairman of the nominating committee, had charge of the election.

Amos Stauffer, incoming president reported on tractor pulls held during the year on the museum grounds.

JESUS HEALS THE BLIND



And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us

And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord

Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you

And their eyes were opened, and Jesus straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it

Chester County farms spotlighted next week

WEST CHESTER, Pa. - Nineteen Chester County farms will be spotlighted next weekend during a Farm-City visit sponsored by the Chester-Delaware County Farmers' Association. Visitation hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

The Farmers Association says the program is designed to "build a bridge of understanding with our city and urban neighbors."

Following are brief sketches of each of the farms which will be visited, plus an additional display at the Russellville Grange.

TOBI HILL FARM - family owned and operated - Bob and Betty Kirk and sons Tom and Bill. Feeding 300 steers for sale through store on farm as freezer or retail orders. We do not feed hormones or chemicals to our cattle. Our meat cutter, Dave Becker, custom processes each order in our store. Take Rt. 322 west to Honey Brook Elementary School. Turn right on Poplar Street, 2½ miles to second crossroad; right on Dampman Road; farm on left.

LUNDALE FARM - MR. and MRS. SAM MORRIS - 230 tillable acres, 55 Holstein cows milked in stanchion barn. Cropstore silo used for storage. One mile south of Rt. 23 on Rt. 100.

BACHELORS FLOWERS - Retail florist operation; nine greenhouses growing plants for holidays. Air conditioning and carbon dioxide controls in houses. Located in Snowdenville; one mile west of Rt. 724 from Parkerford.

KOLB'S FARM STORE - MR. and MRS. ROY KOLB and FAMILY - 225 acre farm, milking 90 head of Holsteins. Milk processing plant and retail dairy store. See pitcher-pack milk packaging machine operation. Learn about first quality farm products through Pennsylvania Agriculture Coop Marketing Assoc. Samples available. Located on Kolb Road at Baptist Church Road 1½ miles west of Rt. 724. Open Saturday only.

FAR OUT CACTUS GREENHOUSE - Features largest collection of cactus on East Coast; 1500 varieties can be viewed in a typical greenhouse operation from seed growing to retail sales. Located on Rt. 52, three miles south of West Chester.

DAVID W. DARLINGTON - Fifth generation family farm of 250 acres. Using pipeline system to milk 47 head of cows. Raising 46 head young stock. Turn south off Rt. 926 at Pocopson; first farm on right.

BURTON SMITH GREENHOUSES - Growing large, single stemmed mums for year-round sales to retailers in a 50 mi. radius. Six greenhouses; 1 acre under glass. Use own stock to propagate for new seedlings. Bear right off Rt. 82 before entering Unionville; take left fork onto Marlboro Rd.; use driveway next to third house on the right.

MODERN MUSHROOM FARMS, INC. - Largest and most modern mushroom growing plant in the East. Visitors can view every phase of mushroom growing. Leave Rt. 1 at Toughkenamon Exit; proceed short distance south on Newark Road.

GLEN WILLOW ORCHARDS - 45 acres of apples; 10 acres of peaches; 55 acres crops. 11,000 bu. cold storage room and modern packing line. Cider mill operating Saturday. Located north of Avondale on Glen Willow Rd.

WILKINSON FARMS - 300 cows milked on an 8-stall Boumatic carousel parlor, housed in two 170' x 50' free stall barns. Feeding done by mixer wagon. Silage and haylage stored in trenches, high moisture corn in uprights. Presently growing 800 acres corn, 300 acres

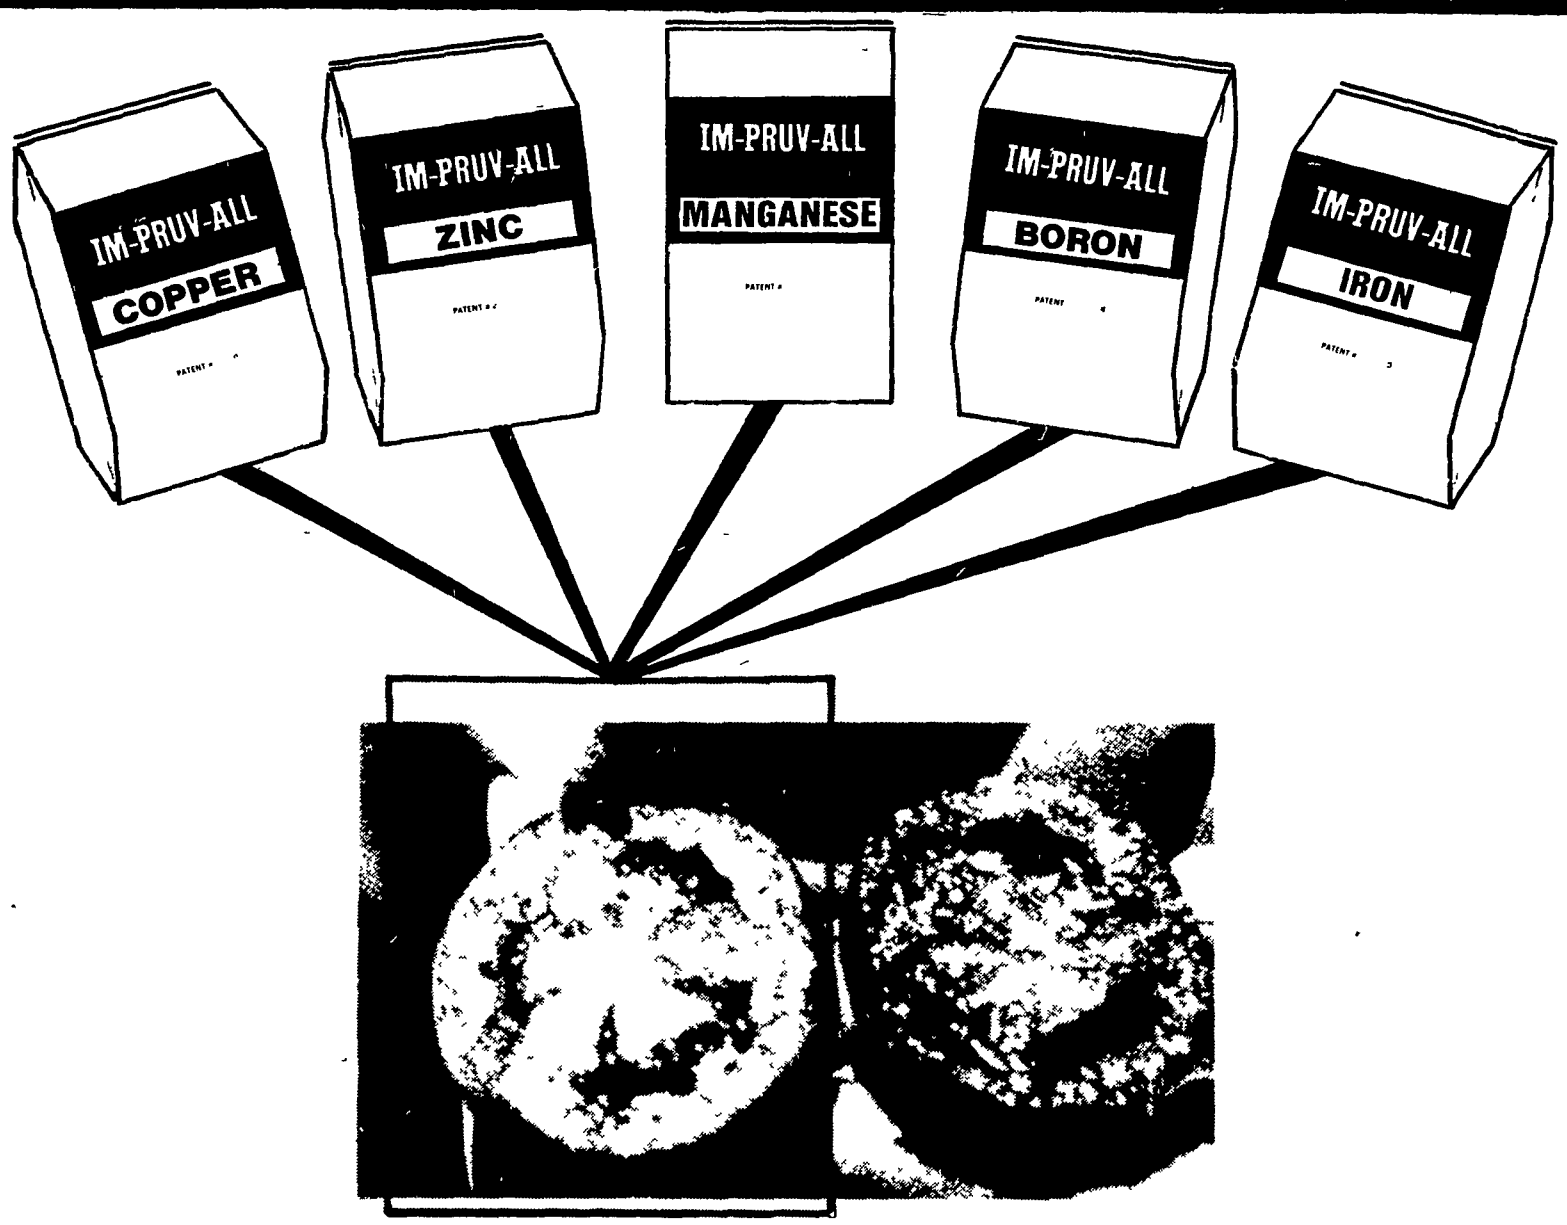
IM-PRUV-ALL



Scientists now recognize more than 100 elements. Most of them occur in plants, but only 17 are currently known to be essential. The 17 known essential plant elements are classified as follows:

ESSENTIAL NUTRIENT ELEMENTS AND THEIR SOURCES

ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS USED IN RELATIVELY LARGE AMOUNTS			ESSTENTIAL ELEMENTS USED IN RELATIVELY SMALL AMOUNTS
Mostly from Air and Water	From Soil Solids		From Soil Solids
Carbon	Nitrogen	Calcium	Iron	Copper
Hydrogen	Phosphorus	Magnesium	Manganese	Zinc
Oxygen	Potassium	Sulfur	Boron	Chlorine
			Molybdenum	Cobalt

Other minor elements such as sodium, fluorine, iodine, silicon, stronitium and barium do not seem to be universally essential, as are the seventeen already cited, although the soluble compounds on some may increase crop growth.

PTO SHAFT

POTTSTOWN, Pa. - A new driveshaft evens torque loads during turns to distribute power better, lessen vibration and extend life, according to the maker.

Neapco says its new 90 degree shaft reduces all the traditional problems with power-take-off in turns without adding cumbersome or troublesome parts.

The new shaft fits directly onto the PTO shaft of the tractor and the implement, just as a standard shaft does. The secret of its operation lies in the shaft's ability to telescope.

As the tractor turns, the shaft contracts so that the angle at the driving yoke and the angle at the driven yoke remain almost equal. Unequal angles at the input and output yokes cause uneven torsional loads, vibration and chattering - all of which work to induce failure. By eliminating the failure-inducers, Neapco says, the new shaft delivers longer life.

At present, the shaft is available in Neapco's 1800 Series for tractors and implements rated up to 48 horsepower at 1000 rpm. It is intended only for original equipment applications, not retrofit.

Neapco's Randy Altenhoff, national sales manager - OEM, says each application will be custom-engineered. Peak loads - not average horsepower - are the limiting criteria, he points out.

TO TEST SOIL

This is an annual thought, but the fall is a very good time to draw soil samples and get them tested before winter sets in. When the needs of the soil are known in the fall, the grower will have more time to place fertilizer orders, and in some cases, will benefit from special discounts for early ordering. The accuracy of the test showing the needs of the soil will be just as good when taken at this time of the year, as next spring. No doubt more prompt reports will be received by doing the testing this fall; the spring months brings a rush and pressure on the testing laboratory. Testing envelopes are available from any County Extension office, or many commercial concerns will do soil testing. Don't wait until next spring to learn the fertilizer needs of the fields.

TO CHECK BARN VENTILATION

Colder weather is ahead of us and many buildings are filled to capacity; the heat from the animals may cause condensation on the windows, ceilings, and walls of the buildings. This is a definite sign of poor ventilation; animal health will be affected, as well as greater depreciation on the buildings. Exhaust fans are often needed to draw out the foul, moisture-laden air; also, additional insulation will help prevent the warm air coming into direct contact with colder air. In some barns a layer of hay, straw, or chopped corn fodder placed on the barn floor will help prevent condensation on the ceiling of the lower levels. Proper ventilation is needed for more pleasant working conditions as well as increased efficiency from the animals or birds.

PERCENT CHANGE IN AVERAGE VALUE OF FARM REAL ESTATE PER ACRE

*BASED ON INDEX NUMBERS OF AVERAGE VALUE PER ACRE AVERAGE INCREASE FOR MAINE NEW HAMPSHIRE VERMONT MASSACHUSETTS RHODE ISLAND AND CONNECTICUT △AVERAGE OF THE PERCENTAGE CHANGE IN GEORGIA AND ALABAMA INDEX VALUES

Land costs may rise by 14 per cent

In the market for some of our Nation's farmalnd? If so, be prepared to dole out an extra 14 percent or so this year to meet rising land costs. Between March 1, 1975, and February 1, 1976, the average value of an acre of farmland climbed almost $50 to $403.

Spiraling land prices aren't a new phenomenon. USDA economists note that over the last 5 years, land values have doubled. However economists now look for a slowdown in rising land values, projected at 8 to 10 percent in the year ending February 1977.

For the year ended February 1, 1976, the Corn Belt and northern Plains States led the advance in soaring land costs. Sharing the No. 1 spot, Iowa and Nebraska both logged increases of more than a fourth.

In the total picture, value of farm real estate rose $51 billion in the 11-month period to $421 billion. Farm buildings accounted for $72 billion of the total.

What's ahead for our farm real estate largely depends on U.S. crop production and export demand. Current projections call for another large crop this year in the midst of a generally favorable income situation.

If worldwide crop prospects diminish, however, a subsequent upsurge in export demand could put an upward pressure on crop prices, incomes, and land values.

Certain recent developments, though, already give cause for a relatively optimistic outlook.

For example, inquiries for farm tracts are up since a year ago, indicating steady to higher market activity throughout 1976.

Part of the reason for the growing number of inquiries: prospective buyers are encouraged by a feeling of increased credit availability.

Two young farmers to get AF degree

By DIETER KRIEG

EPHRATA, Pa. - Two graduates of the Cloister FFA curriculum will be receiving their American Farmer Degrees in Kansas City next week, thereby attaining the highest level of recognition possible within the FFA program. The two are Robin Ginder of Denver R2 and Russel Kline of Denver R3, both of whom are 21 years old and in charge of their own dairy operations.

ROBIN GINDER

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Z. Ginder, Robin has been farming on his own since 1973, when he was still a senior at Ephrata High School. He operates a 94 acre farm, of which 55 acres are tillable, and keeps in the neighborhood of 50 head of Holsteins, including calves. In addition, the young farmer has 2000 chickens.

Asked why he chose to be a farmer, Ginder answered immediately: "To have the life of the farm, to be my own boss, to not be cooped up in a factory all day, and to see the results of what I do. Also, the farm is a good place to raise children - they have something to do and learn responsibility." Ginder became the father of a baby girl just two weeks ago.

A closer look at the young dairyman's operation reveals that he has actually been intensively involved in farming for nearly 10 years. It was in 1967 that his father sold the equipment and cows and put the farm itself on the market as well.

"If Dad had found the right buyer then, I wouldn't be where I am," Ginder announced matter-of-factly.

With the farm not being sold, the Ginder family continued to farm half of their property. Robin did much of the work. Steers were brought in to put the barn to some use. The business increased in size gradually, and Ginder eventually decided to put 25 head of Holsteins back in the barn in 1971. Ginder and his mother tended the animals.

Now the American Farmer Degree recipient has the entire farm back in production and is leasing additional ground from neighbors. The home farm is rented to him by his father.

Two young farmers

Ginder is a 1973 recipient of the Keystone Farmer Degree and also the winner of the highest award in the state for record keeping. "I enjoy keeping records," the young man added modestly. "You should know where you are and where you're going," he explained.

Asked for his outlook on agriculture, the young farmer replied: "If the government stays out and there are no price controls and taxes keep from pushing us out, then I think we'll keep going."

RUSSEL KLINE

An accomplished dairyman with a DHIA herd average of 16,500 pounds of milk and 650 of butterfat on 40 Holsteins, Kline is best known in the area for his winnings on the show circuit. He has been a consistent winner at regional as well as state shows and continues to dedicate much of his time to promoting the breed.

On his own for the past 18 months, Kline rents 67 acres of ground and keeps a total of around 50 Holsteins, most of which are registered.

Kline regards the future of dairying as a good one, although he has some reservations on it due to political trends in the United States. Nevertheless, he claims that the dairy industry is something that people will always have to have, regardless of what they do. Kline wants to be in on the production end.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Kline, Reinholds, the award recipient is a 1973 graduate of Ephrata High School and he credits the school's FFA program for having guided him to where he is. The Cloister FFA Chapter now has had five of its students earn the American Farmer Degree.

The accomplished showman is possibly a contradiction to the common thought that young fellows can't get started in farming anymore without significant help from parents, relatives, or friends. Kline claims to have begun his career in dairying without having had anything given to him for nothing. His herd was initially started with FFA calves, and he credits his vo-ag instructor, Lew Ayres, for having sent him off to a fine start.

As his herd grew and the first animals became of milking age, Kline transferred the cows to his brother's farm at Denver R2.

"Dairy farming is my main interest," Kline said assuredly, adding that it was no secret. Consequently an opportunity to rent a farm came along in the Spring of 1975 and he gladly accepted. Ever since then he and his wife, the former Ellen G. Martin, have been farming on their own. With a gleam in his eye and a broad grin he enthusiastically and proudly added that he had just recently became the father of twin boys - Matthew and Michael.

While still a student, Kline worked at Gehman's Feed Mill near Denver, an experience which he claims taught him a lot about dairy feeds, minerals and vitamins.

In planning his future, Kline wants to stress quality, rather than quantity. He's confident of dairying having a promising future - at least more so than other branches of livestock farming - and predicts that "people will wake up one of these days to realize that farmers are vital to everyone's existence."

the event. Ruby is State treasurer, and Geib is regional vice-president.

Willow Street FFA is the home chapter for another key person attending the convention. Marcia Hess, Pennsylvania State FFA princess, will take part in the festivities as she vies for the national FFA princess title.

Several Lancaster chapters also have members competing in one or more of the eight national agriculture contests. For instance, Ephrata has two boys competing in milk products judging and one in livestock judging. Richard Strauss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strauss, Ephrata R1, is the livestock judge who is going to the convention. Rick placed third in the state contest, so he and the top two boys in livestock judging from Pennsylvania will make up the state team.

Lamar Groff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Groff, Stevens R1, is a milk products judge who placed second in the state contest. Along with Hans Groff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Groff, 123 Lincoln Ave., Ephrata, who is the first place individual in state milk products judging, the Ephrata boys make up the majority of the three-man state team competing at nationals.

Grassland Chapter also has two of its members competing in the national contests. Harry Boley, East Earl, and Kenneth Fox, New Holland, will be competing in the national poultry contest. Robert Woods, vocational agriculture teacher at Garden Spot High School, is the coach. For further information on this area of competition, turn to page 94 for "Thoughts in Passing."

Rick Falk, Millersville R1, is a Penn Manor student and member of the Manor FFA who will be attending the national convention to compete in meats judging.

Brownstown Vo-Tech is also responsible for sending one half of the state's horticulture team and also its coach, Mrs. Jennifer Brown, to the convention. The two girls Brownstown will be sending are Cindy Shreiner, Lititz R1, and Brenda Albright, 10 West Main Street, Leola. These two girls are the top floraculture judges in the state, and comprise half the team which is also made up of two horticulture majors.

This year 40 teams will test their knowledge by identifying plant materials; judging nursery products, and landscape models, taking a written examination in such areas as plant materials, growing media, plant disorders, propogation, safety, and cultural instructions.

In addition to these contestants and state delegates to the convention, several

Speakers announced for FFA convention

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Apollo 16 Astronaut Charles M. Duke and former Olympic weight lifter Paul Anderson "The World's Strongest Man" head the list of keynote speakers scheduled to address the 49th National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Mo., November 9-12. Duke, who holds the record for length of time on the lunar surface with 71 hours and 14 minutes, will address the opening session of the three day convention.

The three day convention is expected to draw an attendance of over 20,000 FFA members and guests. It is the largest youth convention in the nation.

Paul Anderson, billed as "The World's Strongest Man"; won worldwide fame as an Olympic Champion weight lifter in 1956. Since that time he has traveled around the nation and the world speaking to young people on Christianity, patriotism, and the values and fascinations of the free enterprise system.

Other keynote speakers include Texas A & M Student Body President Fred McClure, John Stearns, Producer of AGRICULTURE - USA, and Minnesota Commissioner of Agriculture Jon Wefald. On Friday convention participants will hear Don McDowell, former Secretary of the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, now a member of the National Advisory Council on Vocational Education and currently Executive Director of the National FFA Foundation Sponsoring Committee.

Lancaster County FFA chapters will be receiving awards for superiority in various programs.

The Eastern Region National Chapter Safety Award is one of the awards which the county chapters will receive. This award is based on the extent of extra safety programs which the chapters have run throughout the year. These awards are chosen by regions, so that those chapters in Pennsylvania which have won have competed with 14 other states in the northeastern region. Cloister FFA was one of four chapters in the state to receive the award, and in fact was the highest, receiving a gold emblem.

Cloister FFA also received the National Chapter Award. This award is judge on a system which is scored for all activities in the various areas of FFA. About 60 to 70 per cent of the chapters in Pennsylvania take part in this event, and only the best programs which cover varied areas and involve the most people are chosen. Cloister is one of three chapters in the state receiving a gold emblem, as is Grassland FFA. Manheim FFA is also receiving a bronze chapter award, one of two such awards in the state. Grassland will also be receiving a bronze medal in the BOAC (Building Our American Communities) award program.

While not all the chapters are receiving awards, many of them are sending chapter representatives to the

CLEAN-CHUTE SILAGE KIT:

Climbing the silo chutes is now an easier and safer chore. Silage is received by the durable molded hopper unit which can be trimmed to fit any conventional silo door opening. Silage flows down the 11" plastic tube—large enough to carry the output of heavy duty silo unloaders. The tube is cut to length at the lower end as the silo is unloaded. All the silage is confined to the silo flow. With silage no longer hanging up on chute and steps, corrosion inside the chute is sharply reduced.

These representatives of the British poultry industry toured Lancaster County this week, leaving the area with favorable impressions, but not convinced that American technologies in poultry management and processing are any more advanced than those found in Great Britain. Bob Garland, center, from Hubbard Farms, Neffsville, Pa., hosted the group during their stay.

British poultrymen visit Lancaster County poultry industry

By DIETER KRIEG

LANCASTER, Pa. - The poultry industry in this part of the United States is everything it's cracked up to be, but there might be a few cracks in the business which leave a bit to be desired, according to nine British poultrymen who visited the area last month.

One might think, for example, that the largest poultry business in the world would be in America. It certainly wouldn't be on a little island called Great Britain.

Surprisingly, it is.

Also, the men from the United Kingdom felt that Americans might have a bit more of a disease problem with their flocks than do their counterparts in the "mother country." Mechanization, they felt, was not quite as advanced in some areas as they know it back home.

Nevertheless, they found their visit in Lancaster County and surrounding areas to be quite interesting and worthwhile.

Lest anyone get the impression that the American poultry industry is unimpressive, the visitors were quick to point out their reactions to the cleanliness and neatness of the buildings, both inside and outside. To be sure, the U.S. poultry industry isn't lacking. It just isn't ahead of what's in Europe. At least not according to the nine Britishers who visited here recently. While in the area they were hosted by Hubbard Farms, which maintains sizable facilities near Neffsville, Pa.

Going into more detail on their impressions, several representatives of the Lancaster County poultry industry were told that British poultrymen don't have problems with skin leucosis.

Stocking densities are different. Due to Great Britain's smaller size and lack of access to as many materials as we have in this country, more birds are kept per square foot than in the U.S. For those who want exact figures to compare, they are: one bird for every 6.5 square feet in the U.S. versus one bird for every 4.3 square feet in the United Kingdom. No significant economic response is reported as a result of this greater density in broiler houses.

Feed conversions were a lot better in the United States than they are in Great Britain, the visitors proclaimed. British poultrymen do not feed corn to their broilers and further point out that a white skinned bird is preferred by their consumers rather than one with yellow skin.

It is interesting to note that the foreigners have not really been hurt as much by last Summer's drought as Americans might have thought. "We import 80 per cent of our grain anyway," said one chap, "and prices are based at Chicago."

A Mr. King, who operates five processing plants in the United Kingdom, felt that mechanization in American broiler processing plants was a bit behind European technology.

Another point brought up was the method of marketing and per capita consumption. The average American eats twice as much chicken in a year than his counterpart in

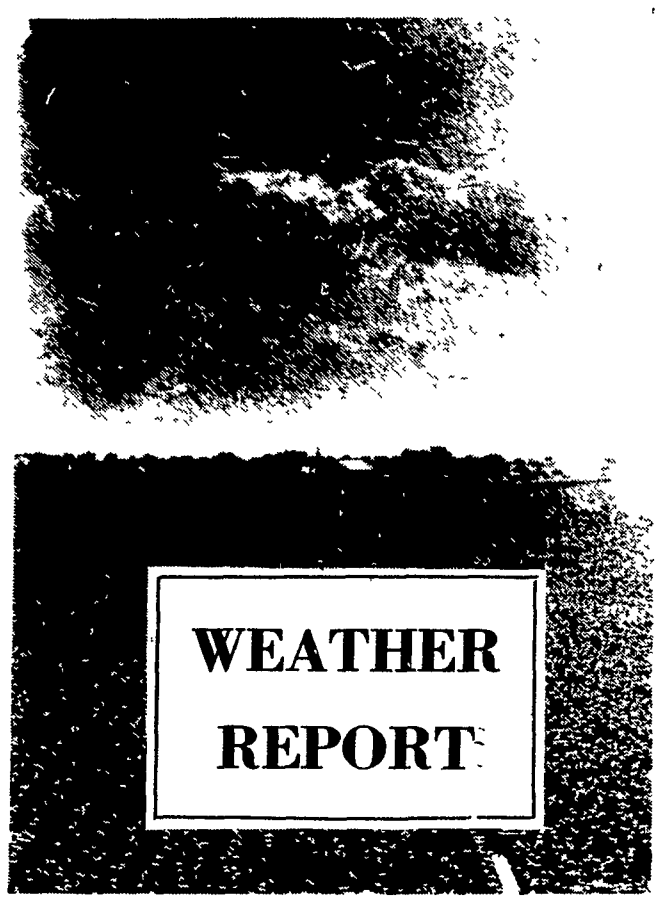
Man's 'playing' with the weather



By DIETER KRIEG

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 12th article in a continuing series on the forces which shape our weather, how we are affected by it, and what is done to forecast and-or alter its patterns.

Excluding drought, the weather is blamed for annual crop losses amounting to 2 million dollars per year. With drought losses added on to that, the figures become even more astronomical and it's no wonder, then, that some groups have begun "tampering" with the weather in order to produce more desirable patterns.

While weather modification is practically ruled out in Pennsylvania because of (1) it's really not needed due to favorable weather most of the time, and (2) state regulations are very rigid, the practice is rather widely accepted throughout the rest of the United States.

More than 30 states recognize "cloud-seeding" as a legitimate business. Some of these don't even require a license or permit to have it done. Neighboring Maryland, on the other hand, bans the practice altogether.

Weather modification is done primarily to produce rain. In those parts of the country where rain is a critical factor, artificially produced participation is generally well accepted by the public. Farmers as well as other businessmen in such areas realize that if the crop is poor, the entire regional economy will have to soak in gloom. Drought increases the cost of living, it is said, and for areas such as the Great Plains States, that's very true. Realizing this, Kansas Senator James B. Pearson earlier this year introduced a bill on Capitol Hill which would establish a national policy on weather modification. Presently there are no federal regulations on private cloud seeding, a term which derives its name from the procedure of "seeding" clouds with chemicals which causes moisture to assimilate and eventually drop as rain.

Supporters of cloud seeding claim that the practice is valid and of great value to saving drought-stricken crops. They say that moisture is in the air - all that has to be done is remove it in the form of rain. Simple as that may sound, the "art" isn't nearly that easy. Not every cloud will respond to seeding. Conditions have to be "ripe." Many weather modifiers and quite a few more farmers have been disappointed with cloud seeding results.

Nevertheless, the practice is anything but dormant. Last year there were 72 known attempts in the United States to make rain artificially. It's expensive when one looks at the figure without the background. A price of $50,000 is common. Divided on a per acre basis by farmers in a given area, the cost is often just a couple dollars per acre, however. Accordingly, farmers are eager to take part in the adventure whenever they see their crops threatened by drought. The returns are supposedly far greater than the cost of either the program or potential losses.

Adding to the concern over drought and its results on U.S. food supplies are reports by the Central Intelligence Agency and various scientists both here and abroad. In a nutshell, the CIA sees potential food shortages as being capable of igniting nuclear war. Various other groups - the Kettering Foundation among them - agree and therefore readily endorse programs aimed at minimizing the drastic effects weather could have on food production.

Some portions of the United States have brought the weather modification issue to the ballot box. Oftentimes it has passed by overwhelming margins. A bill for a national program is pending. Knowledgeable persons on either side of the argument claim that the future of weather modification will depend not so much on science, but on the public's willingness to have it.

To be sure, some people don't want it. A couple in Missouri, for example, have a suit in court to the tune of $150,000, claiming that a weather modification project more than 300 miles away damaged their property.

Such issues and related topics will be the subject of the next article in this continuing series.

Milk processing plant okayed

Administration of the manufacturing facility would involve setting up a board of directors drawn equally from the boards of the two present cooperative structures. The cost of the plant would be shared on a 50-50 basis by the Maryland and Inter-State cooperatives. During peak production times, the proposed facility could handle up to two million pounds of milk daily.

Touching on other areas of concern in his report, President Wessel told the dairyment that, "MCMP continues to be strong financially - this year was one of the best." A total of $360,000, including dividends and refunds, has been returned to members this year, representing a return of 5.8 cents per hundredweight shipped.

Wessel warned of a trend in the patterns of production that he is observing, based on past history of milk production in the nation. As production climbs, prices historically drop. The see-saw pattern reverses when amounts of milk shipped slack off, causing a price rise.

"Dairy farmers are really turning it on!" commented the MCMP president. He projected that the climbing production results from low meat cow prices, a currently favorable milk-feed ratio and the narrowed margin between Class I and II prices.

Other recent board action noted by Wessel was the cooperative's voting to boost the present five cents per hundredweight advertising checkoff to seven cents in the Federal Order 4 area. The decision to vote for the boost was based on higher Class I sales in the Mid-Atlantic region than in many surrounding areas. The Board felt that the sales jump was a direct result of the increased advertising over the area.

During Manager Strock's report, he also detailed the rising milk production nationwide. The major dairying state of Wisconsin, in spite of suffering through the worst drought in the country, has boosted milk output by 14 percent over 1975. Prices have begun to decline, reflecting the increased supply. At the same time, there is a decrease in consumer purchasing of dairy products, due to climbing retail prices.

Strock predicted that the September hundredweight price will probably drop from $11.77 to a December figure of about $10.84. He expects prices to remain at near support levels until the Fall of 1977.

"Quality Milk - What Is It?" was a visual program presented by MCMP's assistant manager and secretary, Boyd Cook. The presentation reminded dairymen of the need to produce a bacteria-free, pleasant tasting product which will pass Food and Drug ratings, as well as win consumer's continued acceptance. Proper milk cooling and paying strict attention to production procedures were stressed.

Cook pointed out a number of problems arising from recent FDA-Public Health inspections. Cleanliness headed the list, both on all milk contact surfaces and inside the dairy house. Water supplies and farm sewerage systems are causing some problems as well.

"For failing Public Health inspections, you receive second class price milk for 90 days," Cook reminded the shippers.

Six FFA members have been selected from the Cloister Chapter to attend the convention. The selection of these members was based on chapter, school, and community leadership activities. Farming program projects and school academic achievements were also considered by the FFA selection committee when the written applications were judged and personal interviews conducted.

These representatives will report to the chapter with a color slide presentation of the convention activities and points of interest visited while on the trip.

For the first time in Ephrata's history, a young lady was selected to represent the chapter at the convention. She is Sheryl Bollinger, the daughte of Mr. and Mrs. Warren F. Bollinger, Lititz R4. come spring, use just 50 pounds of Unipel Starter Special as a dry "pop-up"

Chevron ORTHO

If your aim is to practice high-yield, precision agriculture, you want more out of fall fertilization than just a head start on spring planting. To get it, you need a precision-made fertilizer.

Visit your Ortho dealer and check into UNIPELS. UNIPELS are uniform in analysis, shape, and density from pellet to pellet — not bag to bag or ton to ton . . . the kind of uniformity that delivers a balanced diet for every plant in the field.

UNIPELS contain both quick-acting and long-lasting forms of nitrogen and phosphate homogenized along potash in every single pellet. This means that UNIPELS, plowed down in the fall, will work for you all year 'round.

The same unmatched uniformity and high analysis enables corn growers to apply UNIPEL Starter Special next spring as a "dry pop-up" — right with the seed! With that kind of precision, all you'll need is 50 pounds per acre!

Get maximum value from your fertilizer investment this fall. See your Ortho dealer now, and learn the details on UNIPELS, the new All-Season Fertilizer.

Penn State has revolutionary crop analyzer

Components of the "infrared spectro computer" system analyzing grains and forages at Penn State include six units. Infrared light analysis is carried out in the small black box attached to the white instrument second from left. The systems operator is Melvin R. "Rick" Hoover of York, Pa., doctoral degree candidate.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. - A new and rapid method to determine the quality of forages and feedstuffs for animals, using an infrared instrument and computer, is destined to become a major "breakthrough" in analyzing forage crops and cereal grains, according to plant scientists at The Pennsylvania State University.

The new device is called an "infrared spectro computer" and was developed jointly by scientists of the Agricultural Experiement Station at Penn State and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The "infrared spectro computer" is capable of predicting dry matter, protein, fiber, and total digestible nutrients of hay, grass silage, corn silage, cereal grains, and soybeans. Initial studies indicate that the analytical system can predict the nutritional value of these farm crops very accurately, declared Dr. John S. Shenk, project director and associate professor of plant breeding at Penn State.

Three general areas of application are being considered: (1) interdepartmental forage research at Penn State, (2) nutritional evaluation of farm forages and feedstuffs, and (3) hay marketing.

"If data from ruminant feeding trials can be collected on enough forage samples to calibrate with the technique, weight gains and milk production by animals might be predicted directly from forage samples rather than indirectly from chemical analyses and mathematical equations," Shenk stated.

And he explained that thousands of forage samples are generated each year by research projects within the College of Agriculture. These include animal nutrition experiments, forage management studies, and forage breeding programs. Applied to such projects, the new analytical technology will save considerable time and funds, he claimed.

Moreover, nutritional information provided by the "spectro computer" can be made available to other computer-centered research programs at Penn State. An example would be the Dairy Herd Simulation Program now used by Shenk in his forage breeding projects.

Equally important will be the time saved in analyzing feed and forage samples and in getting the results to farmers. Analysis on the "spectro computer" takes only a few minutes after the sample is dried and ground. And here again, the computer will come in handy to continually update the nutritional value of feed and forage being fed to dairy cows in the Dairy Herd Improvement Association program.

Shenk said that infrared analysis of forages is being studied by a hay marketing subcommittee sponsored by the American Forage and Grassland Council. The objective is to price hay on the basis of its nutritional or feeding value. The Penn State-U.S. Department of Agriculture instrumentation may serve as a prototype for exploring and testing various concepts. Under study is the possibility of analyzing core samples taken directly from a hay bale without further sample preparation.

"We are also planning to use our computer to analyze data from remote infrared instruments connected via telephone lines. The ultimate solution is to make this analytical technology directly accessible to the livestock feeder by way of county agent offices, feed stores, and hay marketing centers throughout the state," he affirmed.

Shenk offers a word of caution about how soon the "infrared spectro computer" might be available for use by farmers. He believes that technology has the capability to do all the things mentioned and more. But he says that "a technology this new and revolutionary will move only at the rate that time, personnel, and funds permit."

Recycled garbage is fine poultry litter

NEWARK, Del. - Recent studies at the University of Delaware have again shown that broilers grown on composted municipal garbage (CMG) perform as well or better than birds raised on conventional litters. The studies were conducted by veterinary pathologist Dr. Robert J. Eckroade, formerly of the department of animal science and agricultural biochemistry, and George W. Malone, poultry research associate at the University's Georgetown Substation. The results of their work are especially significant because the type of material used in this research may become available in large volumes in northern Delaware when a new trash processing facility is built in New Castle County sometime in the near future.

According to Malone, the CMG used in the recent series of tests is produced by the "wind-row" method, a different process from that used to produce composted garbage (by an aerobic digester) used in a previous University study.

In the latest evaluation of new litter materials, researchers at the Substation raised four flocks totaling 12,800 broilers over a one-year period in a comparison of their performance on wood shavings, spent mushroom soil and CMG. Birds were raised in a 40 foot by 96 foot clear span structure with concrete floors. Treatments were randomly distributed among eight 15 foot by 20 foot pens (allowing .75 square feet of space per bird). Four hundred chicks were placed in each pen on an initial litter depth of approximately four inches, with subsequent clean-out only to remove caked litter.

Performance of birds on the different litters was evaluated in terms of four and eight week body weight, feed conversion and mortality; total disease condemnations, breast blister and conformation downgrades; litter moisture content; microbiological assay of the litter; heavy metal and pesticide residue analysis of the litter and body tissue (abdominal fat and liver).

The CMG used in the study is a dark, humus-like material consisting of granular type particles roughly a fourth of an inch or less in diameter. The material is basically a composted paper product with a small amount of plastic and glass cutlets in it. Spent mushroom soil has a somewhat larger particle size and contains various amounts of hay, corn cob, decomposed mushrooms, topsoil and small stones. The shavings used were pine.

The researchers concluded that "wind-row" CMG is equal to, if not superior to, both shavings and mushroom soil as a broiler litter material, particularly in respect to body weight and feed efficiency. Preliminary tests for pesticide and heavy metals residue in both the litter and bird tissue revealed no unacceptable levels.

Proper machine adjustment can hold corn harvest losses down, too. It is very important to adjust your equipment according to the manufacturer's recommendations. Check it frequently, since conditions change and yields vary from field to field.

As long as the farmer can produce more than you need and can find export markets, then it's good news here and overseas.

G.C. Delp honored

NEW HOLLAND, Pa. - George C. Delp, retired past president of Sperry New Holland, has been awarded an honorary life membership in the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute (FIEI)

A director of FIEI, Delp served as president of the organization in 1966. It was under Delp's leadership that Sperry New Holland joined FIEI in 1941, only one year after the company then known as the New Holland Machine Company, was purchased and reorganized by Delp and several other men.

The award was presented at a recent FIEI annual convention in Boca Raton, Fla. In making the presentation, Morris W. Reid, chairman of the Board of FIEI, recognized Delp for his long and distinguished service to the farm and industrial equipment industries.

G. C. Delp

Delp was general manager, secretary and treasurer of Sperry New Holland from 1940 to 1947. He then became president of the company, a position he held until 1969. Though now retired, he continues as an advisor to the present management of Sperry New Holland.

Farm Credit Service holds annual meeting

BIRD-IN-HAND, Pa. - The board of directors for both the Lancaster Production Credit Association and Federal Land Bank Association of Lancaster have both described the past budget year as "very excellent." Based in Lancaster, Pa., the two branches of Farm Credit Service do business in Lancaster, Lebanon, and Dauphin Counties.

The fiscal report was released at the annual meeting held here on Wednesday at the Plain and Fancy Farm Restaurant. Approximately 400 people from the area were in attendance.

Carl A. Brown, general manager of the Federal Land Bank, here, announced that business was good, but cautioned against the continuing escalating prices of farmland in the area. "We're seeing an awful lot of farms in the $3000 to $4000 per acre range in certain sections of the county," he said.

It was reported that "loans have continued to increase steadily and now stand in excess of $82 million." While most of the increase in business was due to expansion of operations, it was also noted that membership increased by 14 per cent this past year.

Agway chief pleased

SYRACUSE, N.Y. - "Adequate supplies of most farm production needs coupled with lower prices this past year were a refreshing change from previous years of shortages and high prices for Northeastern farmers."

This was the message by George Steele, chairman of the Agway Inc. board of directors, to some 5,000 farmer-stockholders, employees, and guests of the cooperative at Agway's 12th annual meeting recently in the Onondaga County War Memorial, here.

Steele, a Pocopson, Pa., dairyman chairman of the board since 1971, said the year was a good one for Agway, too. Increased use of the cooperative by its 118,000 member-stockholders and other customers led to record sales during the fiscal year.

Earnings were sufficient, he said, to return $3.7 million in patronage refunds to members on their purchases of goods and services during the year.

He noted that the number of Agway members continued to climb, and this year topped the 118,000 mark. Total membership when the cooperative was formed 12 years ago with the merger of three regional farmer cooperatives was 85,000.

"This is a remarkable increase," Steele said, "especially in light of a decreasing number of farms in the Northeast during Agway's 12 years of existence."

Young farmers will play an increasingly important part in the affairs of Agway, according to Steele. Each year, the cooperative sponsors the attendance of young couples at the meeting of the American Institute of Cooperation, an educational group consisting of hundreds of farmer cooperatives in the nation.

Steele also recognized 51 young farmer couples who attended the annual meeting as special guests of the organization.

Agway members and others demonstrated their confidence in the cooperative during the year, according to Steele, by purchasing more than $18 million in securities.

AFBF slates meeting

PARK RIDGE, Ill - Government farm programs, taxation, spending, inflation, international trade, and the adverse impact of federal regulatory agencies on food production are expected to be the major policy issues discussed at the 58th annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Honolulu January 9-11. With the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 expiring with the 1977 crop year, more than usual attention will be devoted to Farm Bureau recommendations to the Administration and Congress for programs designed to promote a market-oriented agriculture.

The convention is expected to be the largest ever for the organization with an anticipated attendance of 15,000 farm people. Policies on both national and international issues will be adopted by the voting delegates representing 49 state Farm Bureaus and Puerto Rico (Alaska has no Farm Bureau.) The Federation is the largest general farm organization in the nation with more than 2.5 million member families.

Soviet graineries visited

WASHINGTON, D.C. - A U.S. Department of Agriculture grain storage team, returning from an Oct. 4-23 trip to the Soviet Union, reported last week that a feeling of optimism among the Soviets regarding the grain crop this year.

The USDA team reported that the grain procurement plan of 87.5 million tons should be surpassed and will probably come close to the record 90.5 million tons obtained by the State in 1973. The harvest of corn and rice in the southern parts of European USSR is late and still continuing.

The team also noted that the Fall sown cereals in areas visited in the Ukraine and North Caucasus are in good to excellent condition. Since soil moisture supplies are good, it appears that prospects are excellent for the crop to go through the Winter with minimal losses.

The USDA grain storage team visited the Soviet Union under terms of the U.S.-USSR Agreement of Cooperation in the Field of Agriculture. For the most part it visited grain storage and processing facilities under jurisdiction of the USSR Ministry of Procurement. That Ministry is responsible for purchasing grain from the state and collective farms, for storage, processing, and distribution.

The facilities visited included elevators and flat storage warehouses at grain receiving points where farms deliver grain to the Government; the elevator at the Black Sea port of Edessa; and several mills where wheat and other grains are processed into flour and various types of cereal.

Bureau of rural affairs

HARRISBURG, Pa. - Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Raymond J. Kerstetter has announced that the Department's Bureau of Rural Affairs has agreed to cosponsor the first state-wide Pennsylvania Transportation Conference '76, to be held Nov. 22-23, 1976 at the Holiday Inn-Town, in Harrisburg.

Other sponsors of the conference include the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation, the Pennsylvania Delegation of the National Council for the Transportation Disadvantaged, the Pennsylvania Taxi Cab and Para-transit Association and the Pennsylvania State Association of County Commissioners.

The Conference is aimed at identifying the many types of transportation problems and will attempt to coordinate solutions to get maximum results from transportation programs in the most cost-efficient manner.

Many national and state leaders are scheduled to speak at the Conference, but its real value, said Kerstetter, is that, "This represents the first time that the many modes and users of transportation will be together to work on solutions to common problems." The Department's Rural Transportation Division has been providing technical and managerial assistance for rural transportation providers since legal opinions made continued direct service provision impossible.

PennDOT has agreed to publish the proceedings of the Conference so that those unable to attend will have a record of the transcripts.

The Pennsylvania Transporation Conference '76 will be financed by registration fees and cash grants from the National Council for the Transportation Disadvantaged and the Pennsylvania Bus and School Bus Association.

Further information regarding the Conference can be obtained by contacting the Bureau of Rural Affairs, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 N. Cameron St., Harrisburg, Pa., 17120, or by calling (717) 783-8463.

Bicentennial farm

Two worlds meet at Meadowview Farm

By DIETER KRIEG

EDITOR'S NOTE: Agriculture is the foundation of any civilization. During this Bicentennial Year LANCASTER FARMING has been saluting the area's farmers through feature stories on farms which have been in the same family for 100 years or more. This is the 26th such article in a continuing series.

FALMOUTH, Pa. - A hill near here, in Londonderry Township, Dauphin County separates the ultra-modern from a peaceful old relic of the past.

Tell-tale signs of what lies to the north of the hill are visible from miles around. The old structure on its southern slope isn't visible until you're practically on top of it.

Narrow roads twist their way through the area, brushing against fields of corn, hay, and weeds. The Conewago Creek, which meanders through peaceful pastures, separates this portion of Dauphin County from neighboring Lancaster County.

A glimpse of the ultra-modern is somewhat awesome. Suddenly seeing the "old timer" is like being pulled back into the 19th Century.

Long before I arrived at "Meadowview Farm," the real subject of this story, I was catching occasional glimpses of huge clouds of steam lazily crawling out of two gigantic cooling towers. This, one might say, was the plumage of a quiet, yet immensely powerful atomic plant. Leaping across the hills in various directions were a number of high-tension power-lines. The steel towers loomed overhead, dominating the landscape and dwarfing any tree or building. A pair of insulators on one of these towers is said to weigh 5000 pounds.

The road to "Meadowview Farm" took a turn towards a hollow and the "plumage" and electric lines disappeared from view. Majestic trees, dressed in their spectacular Fall foilage, were on "center stage." And then there was the relic of the past:

An old covered bridge.

Hidden among the hills and trees, it linked the two counties, while muddied waters of recent rains stumbled across the slick rocks below.

Each plank in the old span announced the passage of my car, and rhythmic pounding reverberated through its hollow superstructure.

Except for that one sound, no other noise disturbed the serenity of that cool and bright November morning. The atomic plant was as quiet as the hills, and the sound of flowing water was as soft as the breeze combing its way through the trees.

Nearby some cattle grazed contentedly on grass which was still green. A squirrel darted up an oak tree.

This is the environment that surrounds "Meadowview Farm," a 230-acre tract of land nestled in the hills about four miles south of Middletown and a half mile east of the Susquehanna River. It's a quiet and modest part of the country - much like many of the people who originally settled here.

Among these early settlers was Jacob Nissley, the son of John Nissley, a Swiss immigrant who came to America in the 18th Century. Jacob was presumably the first of the Nissleys to have possession of this farm. Today the property is owned by a seventh generation descendant, Clair Nissley, and his wife, the former Ruth Leaman.

The Nissleys, like generations before them, are members of the Mennonite Church, which was booted out of Europe several hundred years ago. It was this lack of religious freedom which sent thousands of Europeans to America. According to historians, Europe at that time was being plundered and torn apart by rival princes and kings. The general population was at their mercy, especially if they expressed views differing from those who held power and wealth. One account claims that it took some European families 200 years to regain the equivalent of possessions they had held prior to the Thirty Years War (1618-1648, fought primarily on political and religious issues involving Catholics and Protestants in Central Europe)

Meadowview Farm, located among the rolling hills west of Middletown, has beef cattle, swine, and chickens as primary enterprises.

The early settlers in America had their share of problems too:

A new and strange land, an ocean apart from familiar surroundings and people, no "modern" or cultural background the new settlers could latch on to, some hostile Indians, diseases, to name a few.

But they were able to acquire some land comparatively cheap, and the right to work and worship as they pleased.

So begins the family tree of many an American family.

Clair Nissley's present property was nearly twice as large at one time - running all the way from the Susquehanna River on the west to the Conewago Creek to the east and south. Up until 1920 there was also a grist mill, which reportedly had a rather thriving business during its lifespan. When the old mill was taken down, as many of the materials as possible were used in the construction of a barn. Very little was ever wasted by these people.

Nissley describes his farmland as "pretty good," and notes that it holds moisture especially well. The hills set this area apart from more level areas to the east and south. Nissley notes that this part of Dauphin County was once a part of Lancaster County.

A seventh generation farmer of this property, Nissley's primary concerns are 150 head of beef cattle, 100 hogs, as many as 5,000 chickens, and a produce route in Middletown. The sales project in town is unique, and a family tradition for several generations. Remembering when more than a half dozen farmers had such routes in Middletown, Nissley today admits it's a practice which has seen its day. He still considers the weekly trips worthwhile, however, and some of his customers are families which have purchased his products for generations.

The only tractor found on this farm prior to 1948 was an old Allis-Chalmers U for belt power. Prior to that all field work was done with horses, and Nissley can easily remember following a one-bottom plow. Other experiences he can bring back to mind vividly include shocking corn and operating a one-row, horsedrawn cultivator. Electricity came to the farm in 1938. A "light plant" provided electricity prior to that. When the telephone was installed in about 1937, "neighbors from pretty far around would come to use it," Nissley said with a smile.

The Nissley's 4-bedroom house once was home for 13 family members. Constructed of logs and mortar, the aging building is still very sturdy. But, says Nissley, it's had to be treated for termites. A large fireplace once dominated the interior, but it has been taken out and the house's present owners speculate that the brick cellar floor may have been the fireplace at one time.

Aside from the main house, there's also an old summer house, which in more recent years has been put to use as regular living quarters. It's original purpose was for butchering, summertime cooking, laundering, and applebutter making.

Corn is the main crop on the farm. Powerline towers might count as a close second. "Meadowview Farm" has 23 such steel monsters constructed on it, and a total of 80 acres is registered by the tax office as right-of-ways for power lines.

Nissley had a chance to sell his farm for pretty good money when the atomic plant sought more land to expand with. But he turned it down.

"I suppose that having had it in the family for so long had something to do with it," he explained. Both he and his wife expressed a closeness to the farm, and their heritage, adding that they hope their children will continue the tradition of owning a "Bicentennial farm."

Snowmobiles must be licensed

HARRISBURG, Pa. - Rep. Kenneth E. Brandt, R-Lancaster, has urged new snowmobiles owners to immediately register their vehicle or face a chance of fines when the Fall and Winter snows arrive.

Brandt said the present registration which began last December 1, runs until November 30, 1977. The registration fee is $10 but will drop to $5 on December 1 when half of the current registration period remains. Applications can be obtained by contacting the Snowmobile Unit of the State Department of Environmental Resources.

"If you are caught without a registered machine a fine of $10 or more can be levied by Bureau of Forestry personnel, game wardens, police, or state parks personnel.

"Some 55,000 snowmobiles are registered in this new two-year program designed for snowmobile safety.

He said all questions concerning regulations of snowmobile use can be directed to: Department of Environmental Resources, Snowmobile Unit, P.O. Box 1467, Harrisburg, Pa. 17120; or telephone 717-783-1364.

KERB® GIVES TOP CONTROL OF QUACKGRASS AND CHICKWEED ALONG WITH OTHER GRASSES AND WEEDS IN ALFALFA

Quackgrass, and other perennial and annual grasses like bluegrass, ryegrass, cheatgrass, and wild oats, along with weeds like chickweed and others need no longer lower the quality of your alfalfa hay. A fall or winter application of KERB herbicide from Rohm and Haas Company controls the 15 most common grasses and weeds that rob your forage crop of water and nutrients and deprive it of growing room. Stands can stay productive and profitable longer and produce higher protein, more digestible hay for feeding to dairy or beef animals.

Hay buyers, sellers, and those who feed their own, all know the dollar value of the superior quality hay, which weed control can help produce.

Leader serves 40 years

NEWARK, Del. - Mrs. Lola Gibbs started the Woodside Silverleaf 4-H Club back in 1936 when she was teaching in a one-room schoolhouse. She's been the dedicated leader of this club ever since and now, 40 years later, works with the children of some of the original members. Kent County, Delaware, 4-H'ers decided this record was something to crow about, and at their recent annual achievement banquet at Caesar Rodney Junior High School in Camden, they honored Mrs. Gibbs for her long years of service.

The former teacher says she has no idea how many young people she's worked with in 4-H during this time, but it has to be a lot Silverleaf membership has often numbered 50-60 and at one time got as high as 70 Officially, 4-H serves kids 9-18, but Mrs Gibbs has never been able to turn away the younger brothers and sisters who clamour to participate So there are usually a number of 6, 7 and 8 year-olds in her group, as well.

Now, from Beacon--
Super-Pels*
--the proven feed with more usable protein.

*available in pellets or mash

Cows need protein for milk production. Agreed. But all protein is not usable protein.

The amount of soluble protein a cow can use is definitely limited. Many cows today may get too much soluble protein and the excess may be wasted. That's expensive!

The current trend is to feed more fermented roughage and high moisture grains and less dry hay, dry grains and commercial formula feeds. The combination of fermented roughages and fermented grains may have a higher level of soluble protein than the cow can use. This decreases efficiency and lowers milk production.

To balance roughage programs high in soluble protein, Beacon has formulated Super-Pels, a high-quality grain ration low in soluble protein levels, to compensate for the highly soluble roughage. The Super-Pels formulation is constant. It will never change, and it's one of the most palatable feeds ever produced.

Super-Pels have been tested for two years on farms in two states. The result? Significantly higher production.

WHO NEEDS SUPER-PELS?

Super-Pels is only for the herd that meets all of these qualifications:

- A well-managed herd of 15,000 pounds or more production average.
- Fed a diet which, in large part, is high in fermented roughage.
- The farm is on a roughage analysis program.

Beacon Super-Pels, fed properly, is just one more example of why so many dairymen look to Beacon for "No-Nonsense Feeding."

"The free-enterprise system is the very foundation of the American way of life."

Agway reports second billion dollar sales year

SYRACUSE, N.Y. - Record use of Agway Inc. products and services by members resulted in the cooperative's second billion-dollar sales year, according to Ronald N. Goddard, executive vice president and chief executive officer of the organization.

Operating and financial figures for the 1975-76 fiscal year were reported to 5,000 member-stockholders and guests on Oct. 28 at the Agway annual meeting in Onondaga County War Memorial, here.

Sales from internal operations for the business year ended June 30, 1976, were $1,019,758,000, about $19 million more than the previous year, he said. Earnings, after taxes, were $20.2 million, some $2.7 million more than the 1974-75 fiscal year.

Goddard noted that these figures do not include sales of two controlled subsidiaries, Texas City Refining, Inc., and Curtice-Burns, Inc. Consolidation of these subsidiaries in the audited statement raises total sales to more than $1.4 billion, up $100 million from the previous year. It is on the basis of Agway's consolidated statement that Agway ranks 145th on Fortune magazine's current list of the nation's top 500 industrial corporations.

Agway Inc., a farm supply and food marketing cooperative owned by 118,000 member-stockholders, serves agriculture in 12 northeastern states. Its headquarters are in Syracuse, N.Y.

Goddard said that the shortages that had plagued farmers since late in 1973 began to ease during the first half of the past fiscal year, followed by somewhat lower prices in a number of cases.

"But," he said, "inflation is still very much with us, and farmers will still have to contend with the devastating effects of increased costs of labor, capital, and production supplies."

Ronald Goddard

Henry W. Bibus

George Steele

Other treats to the well-being of Northeastern farmers are growth in government and a gradual erosion of the free enterprise system, according to Goddard. He called for restraint by government in hiring, spending, and in its involvement in business, especially farming.

The Agway executive said "the free enterprise system is the very foundation of the American way of life," and expressed concern about pressures that could rob the individual of control over his own destiny while strengthening the power of the government.

"Farmers have always been among the strongest advocates and practitioners of free enterprise," he said.

Goddard added that employees are being asked for a "renewed commitment to help members increase their net incomes."

"Farmers know they need to practice dynamic, progressive farm management techniques," he said, "and Agway intends to provide them with the products and services they need to do so."

"With only five per cent of the nation's population working the soil," Goddard said, "95 per cent are free to seek employment in industry and other fields of business. Thanks to farmers, Americans eat well and enjoy the highest standard of living in the world."

"The United States has come a long way in the last 200 years," the executive added. "It can continue to progress in the years to come, if its people have the will to make it go forward."

George Steele, chairman of the Agway board of directors, in his report to the membership, expressed optimism for the future of agriculture in the Northeast. He added that, despite a steady decline in the number of farms since Agway's formation, the number of farmers joining Agway has increased for each of its 12 years of existence.

Steele also said that Agway is encouraging young farmers to become more involved in the cooperative and in agriculture in general. He added that some 50 young farmer couples from across the cooperative's territory were invited to the annual meeting as special guests.

Steele, Goddard, and Henry W. Bibus, vice chairman of the board, were all re-elected at the meeting to serve as Agway's three top officers.

Steele, a Pocopson, Pa., dairyman, has served as board chairman since 1971. Prior to the founding of Agway, when he became one of its directors, he served as vice president of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, one of Agway's predecessors.

A member of the Agway board since 1964, Bibus, a Wrightstown, N.J., vegetable and grain grower, was first elected vice chairman in 1971. He had been a director of Cooperative GLF Exchange, another of Agway's predecessor organizations, for 18 years.

Goddard has been with Agway since 1937. He held a number of key positions in the cooperative's retail, planning, and marketing operations before being named assistant general manager in 1968 and general manager in 1969.

Adams County holds Farm-City Week

GETTYSBURG, Pa. - "A eclaration of In-rdependence" was the eme for this year's Adams unty Farm City Week nner Dance. Over 200 rmers and town residents ended the dinner dance to nclude a week of busy tivities. Stanley Wolf, rm City Week co-airman, announced this ar's celebration was the st in the history of the county. Over 500 people visited the Farm-City display next to the Adams County Courthouse which featured chickens, goats, turkeys, dairy and beef cattle, sheep, farm machinery and educational exhibits. Approximately 200 county residents visited farms on Sunday to become better acquainted with the county's agriculture. In return various museums in Gettysburg allowed county residents to tour their facilities free on Tuesday, reported Wolf at the banquet.

Wayne Cluck, representing Gettysburg Kiwanis, stated Kiwanians this year were again proud to be the national sponsors of Farm-City Week. Kiwanis feel eliminating the misunderstanding between farmers and their urban businessmen by bringing them together is an important goal of Farm City Week.

John Peters representing the county's farmers felt there was great interdependence between farm and urban population. "We need you to keep our county's farms operating. Banks, health services, supermarkets, machinery dealers, clothing stores, oil companies are just a few businesses today's farmer needs to produce the necessary food and fiber to feed this country and the world". Peters stated. He reported Adams County produces more fruit than any other county in the United States and is one of the top ten counties in turkey, broiler, eggs, dairy, small grains, corn, and beef production in Pennsylvania even though it ranks 44th in land area.

This year's Farm City Week observance was sponsored by the Adams County Agricultural Council in cooperation with the Gettysburg Kiwanis and Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce.

Pequea Valley

Pequea Valley will also be sending a group to the convention. Holly Fuess, vocational agriculture teacher will chaperone them.

The group consists of Mike Martin, Honeybrook R2; Steve Diener, Intercourse; Galen Sweigart, Gordonville R1; Elvin Weaver, Kinzers R1; Harry Kreiser, Gap R2; Dale Miller, Gap R1; Larry Stoltzfus, Gordonville R1.

Penn Manor

The Manor FFA chapter has by far the largest number of representatives going to the convention. Including Michael J Burton, who will accompany the group, there are 14 members going out in the school's bus. Those attending are Bruce Landis, Lancaster R6; Bill Korman, Mountville; Kevin Kilheffer, Lancaster; John Mylin, Willow Street; John Myers, Lancaster; Skip Rice, Lancaster; Rick Hunt, Millersville; Jim Risser, Lancaster R2; Craig Harnish, Lancaster R6; Don Almond, Lancaster; Jay Shertzer, Millersville; Ray Caldwell, Millersville; Galen Long, Columbia; and Daryl Hershey, Millersivlle.

On the trip out, the various groups will be stopping at points of interest along the way. Several popular spots are the Air Force Museum at Dayton, Ohio; Indianapolis Speedway; Mark Twain's home in Hannibal, Mo.; the Harry Truman Library Museum, Independence Mo.; the Linton Charolais Farm, Mo.; and Purina Farms, Grays Summit, Mo.

British poultrymen

England. The U.S. market is largely fresh, while it's 70 per cent frozen in the Queen's territories. All chilling in Great Britain is done by air, in contrast to water cooling in America. An estimated 360 million broilers are processed annually in the United Kingdom.

"The U.S. poultryman has himself geared to grain prices," one of the visitors observed, noting that this isn't so in his homeland. "Grain prices don't vary all that much in Great Britain," he explained. Also, there's more private enterprise in the United States, which allows for a few more economic formulas than what might be found in Great Britain.

Claiming the distinction of being the world's biggest egg producer is the corporation of W. and J.B. Eastwood, Ltd. Some facts about their gigantic operation include:

Six million laying hens, which comprise 18 per cent of the entire egg industry in Great Britain. A weekly kill of 850,000 broilers accounts for 15 per cent of the country's total. All told, they produce more than 40 million broilers per year.

A fully integrated company, Eastwood has its own docks at the harbor, its own transportation facilities, its own feed mill, and much more. An interesting fact about the milling business is that they process 8000 tons per week, but don't sell a gram of it. All those birds eat an awful lot. Eastwood also has its own construction company to go to work whenever new buildings are needed. Its land holdings add up to approximately 15,000 acres. In addition to all of this, the firm kills 450 pigs per week and maintains a herd of 1300 sows.

And that's not all.

Eastwood Limited produces its own boxes and sells its own products, whether it be broilers, eggs, red meat, or what have you. They've got breeders and hatcheries and make good use of recycling technology.

On the latter, it was reported that British poultrymen receive less static from their government and the public than Yankee chicken farmers. Using "wastes" is widely practiced and accepted. Dried poultry manure is frequently used as a protein substitute, as are the wastes from processing houses.

Commenting on the buildings, the foreigners said Americans spend more money on their poultry houses. "Aluminum siding is too expensive in Britain," said one, while another nodded in quick agreement. Two-story houses are unheard of. Fuel is considered a bargain here, compared to prices in Europe, where a gallon of gasoline sells for approximately $1.20.

A final comment was made on exports. Great Britain does have an export market and it's unique in that a council of the broiler industry takes care of these matters. The income from sales abroad is therefore not exclusive to any particular firm, but is instead a venture in which all members share.

HARVESTORE OWNERS AND FRIENDS:

Penn-Jersey HARVESTORE announces a celebration to close out the Bicentennial Year of 1976.

We have selected two days for your choice, Thursday, November 11 at a Lancaster County Restaurant and Friday, November 12, at a Lehigh County Restaurant.

As a special treat, we have Ken Pendall, Ithaca, Michigan. Ken is a HARVESTORE Owner with a large, successful Dairy Operation and he keeps you laughing as he describes "life on his Michigan Farm" .

Dinner will be a real Harvest delight, ladies, prepared so that you will get a day off from your kitchen. No need to cook again on this day !

In the afternoon, we have reserved for your entertainment "The Singing Sheriff" of Anderson, Indiana. Richard Dennison, Manager, Penna. Farm Management & Business Analysis service, will discuss two very important subjects: Tax Credit Advantages and Estate Planning.

Come early -- Program starts at 10:30 A.M. and you will be out by 2:30 P.M.

Now, here's how you can help us and do your neighbor a good turn. Please invite a neighbor or relative who is in the business of Dairy or Livestock Farming (no city slickers, please). Let's show your guests how much fun it is to go to a HARVESTORE Family Celebration.

We will be looking for you Thursday or Friday so be sure to phone us at (717) 354-4051 so we know how many to expect at our dinner table. Ask for Vanessa.

Please note there is no charge for your reservation. Come as our Guest. Call --

WAYNE Pig Balancer

. . . takes the guesswork out of feeding hogs

Behind Wayne Pig Balancer is a reputation nd record of performance that make it standard for comparison. There's a ound basis for this record. The research ehind its development makes Pig alancer formulation superior to other ommonly used supplements or soy— remixes.

Some of the reasons that account for Pig Balancer's predictable performance are:

- quality ingredients
- proper balance of available amino acids
- ample vitamin fortification
- ample fortification of available minerals

Recent results on 7000 hogs from commercial operations like your own, showed that with Wayne Pig Balancer, it took only 3¼ pounds of feed on the average to grow and finish each pound of market hog.

7,000 hogs. 3.24 average feed conversion. When it happens 7,000 times, Wayne Pig Balancer is hardly a gamble. These are the kinds of records you can trust.

Waynextra for Swine No. 1

A concentrated formula of medication and nutrition for the prevention and treatment of certain diseases of swine of all ages.

- Promotes growth in the presence of broad spectrum gram negative and gram positive organisms
- Assures more than adequate vitamin levels in hogs during bacterial stress
- Special carrier assures that hogs receive correct amount of medication.

The New Zealand experience: two girls in Chester Co. reminisce

By SUSAN KAUFFMAN
Feature Writer

The first day of November was a very brisk, cold, clear day foretelling the coming of even colder snowy days of winter in North America. The changing of the seasons is a delight to many in our part of the world. To Loreta Turner and Denise Carey the approach of freezing winds and snowy skies point to the basic difference between their experiences in a land south of the equator from those in Chester County, Pa.

Loreta Turner, a vibrant 19-year-old from New Zealand, has been visitng the United States since January and Denise Carey, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carey, Oxford, R. 1, was a guest in New Zealand from August 1975 until this past July. While Denise was living with a family perhaps 300 miles from Loreta's home, Loreta was leaving to come to the United States and live with families in the Oxford area. Although it was coincidental that the girls were placed as close as they were, both were part of the Rotary Exchange program. Since Denise's return to her home in July, she and Loreta have had many opportunities to "compare notes" about New Zealand since they are both presently seniors in the Oxford High School.

Both girls agree that the biggest difference between New Zealand and southeastern Pennsylvania is the weather. New Zealand consists of two large islands, North Island and South Island, and several smaller islands situated in the Pacific Ocean southeast of Australia. New Zealanders enjoy a semi-tropical climate where sheep, dairy cattle, and citrus fruit flourish. The seasons are reversed from ours in the United States because New Zealand is south of the equator and its winter months which occur in June, July, and August are marked only by an occasional killing frost.

Loreta and Denise have experienced the educational programs of both countries and have agreed that each program has its faults and advantages in trying to reach young people. The major difference between New Zealand's educational system and America's is the rigidity with which classes are formed and the fact that university expenses are paid by the government in the British program in New Zealand. This system requires the wearing of school uniforms and advancement from one "form" to another only by passing standardized, comprehensive tests. Once a student passes a university entrance examination and has received high grades during his schooling, his university education is paid by the government.

Even though higher education is free, Loreta, the native New Zealander, says fewer young people pursue a university education than in America. Most of her friends have become discouraged by the constant threat and pressure of examinations at the end of each school year, and from that they leave school by our tenth or eleventh grade to take government jobs which for them are not necessarily an occupations that fulfill their interests.

Loreta agrees with Denise's opinion that New Zealand youth are much less preoccupied with self-awareness of their own goals and interests.

Denise Carey, who stayed in New Zealand from August 1975 until last July, models a native Maori costume and shows British currency used in New Zealand. The symbol on Denise's Maori tribal costume stands for "peace."

Homestead Notes

"This is not necessarily the fault of the schools, though," Denise explains. "The kids are much calmer, not so hustle, bustle or concerned with their personal appearance and or with wearing what everyone else does. Uniforms stop that in school. But even outside of school they are not as self-conscious about styles as Americans are," Denise added.

Loreta lives with her older sister in Petone, New Zealand, an urban area near the capital city of Wellington. While in America she has lived on the farm with the Calvin Brown family and in a rural community with the Tom Scallan and Ed James families in the Oxford area. Although she lives in an urban area in New Zealand, Loreta says she is not as isolated from the agricultural surroundings as the American city dweller is. People living in the urban areas of New Zealand have gardens and fresh foods all year round.

"Because of our mild climate there is not so much canning, freezing and putting up like here," Loreta explains. "In New Zealand there is a close tie between city and rural people and their produce," she adds.

Denise, not a farm girl herself, did live on farms in New Zealand. After learning about American farming practices she has drawn some comparisons and contrasts with farming in New Zealand. Since the weather is warm and crops grow nearly year round, the New Zealand farmer does not have to have large barns to protect his cattle or have feed storage structures such as corn cribs or silos. The cows are milked in "sheds". One farm family she lived with had a three-sided milking shed with an open front. The 80 cows were milked in the 10 tie-stalls with a pipeline hook-up to the bulk tank housed in an enclosed building beside the milking shed. Denise said other dairy farmers have herringbone parlors or circular parlors.

The cattle graze on grass crops in paddocks, or meadows, throughout most of the year. In the winter - June and July- all the cows are dried off. Prior to the winter, the farmer cuts the grasses and piles them in the paddock and covers them with plastic. This haylage is fed only for a few weeks until it is warm enough to grow grazing crops once again. The climate permits the dairy farmer to avoid expensive machinery for harvesting and storing feeds. Denise says the farms are heavily subsidized. Sheep farming is the main agricultural industry with dairy products and citrus fruits second and third. During the lambing season there are 20 sheep to every person living in New Zealand - 60 million sheep to 3 million people on 104,000 square miles.

One of Denise's host families milked dairy cattle and grew tangelos, grapefruit, and mandarin oranges. They also had a few chickens, some pigs and a highly trained herding dog. "Dogs are trained workers in New Zealand," she added.

Denise was most fortunate in being placed in the Opotike area. This small town on the coast of the Bay of Plenty is where most of the Polynesian natives of New Zealand now reside. These brown-skinned people, called Maori, continue their traditional heritage in dance and costume during festivals but are amalgamated into the normal economy of modern New Zealand.

Perhaps because of her natural interest in music Denise especially appreciated being placed in this unique area. She learned many of the tribal dances and brought home with her the native Maori costume which consists of a skirt made of the dried flax plant. It looks as if it is made of short sections of reeds connected with threads, but it is actually made from separate flax plants, resembling Iris leaves, which have dried and curled tightly. The women separate the fibers at regular intervals down the "leaf" and then dye them

Crepes are a popular, versatile food

By JOANNE SPAHR

LEBANON, Pa. - "This is the year of the crepe," announced Alletta Schadler (Lettie), Extension home economist for Lebanon County, at a homemakers' workshop she conducted recently. Supposedly, says Lettie, the pancake-like food is to become as popular in 1976 as the crock pot.

And, yet, many housewives shy away from making it.

"I think the image of a crepe (pronounced to rhyme with "step") is of an expensive, gourmet, flaming dessert," Lettie explained. "But, actually, there are so many things you can do with it that it's awesome."

According to Lettie, the food is so versatile that once a homemaker gets the knack, she can use the crepe for every single dish of her meal - as an appetizer, a vegetable dish, an entree, or a dessert.

"Of course, if you do that, you may find it to be a little monotonous by dessert," quipped the home economist with her wry wit, but she made her point.

These are just a few of the multitude of dishes that can be made with crepes. The foods range from desserts to main dishes to appetisers.

Although Americans associate this food primarily with the French, almost every nationality makes use of the thin pancake in cooking. The recipes aren't necessarily the same, but they are nearly all of similar type.

For instance, the French "crepe" is an "egg roll" to the Chinese; a "tortilla or enchilada" to the Spanish, "cannelloni" to the Italian, "blintz" to the Jewish; and "platter" to the Swedish.

INGREDIENTS

The ingredients for the crepe are "very, very simple." All the various recipes have four basics - eggs, including the whole yolks, flour, ½ teaspoon salt, and liquid. The majority of the recipes also have some shortening, oil, or butter. In reference to the shortening,

McSparran speaks to State Grange youth

SHARON, Pa. - Loss of America's "freedom to work" was deplored by J. Collins McSparran, of Camp Hill, past master of the Pennsylvania State Grange, in an address here during the 104th Annual State Grange convention, recently.

McSparran was the speaker at the annual youth banquet and party of the Pennsylvania State Grange. In his address, McSparran cautioned the young grangers that a basic freedom of the American people, the freedom to work, was lost in the 1930s. While unions in the past have served an important and useful function, McSparran declared, "it is imperative now to enact a right-to-work law and eliminate the need for workers to pay tribute to any organization."

He also told the youth group that "if democracy is going to work, you must take part in it."

First place in a demonstration team competition that evening was won by the Fayette Pomona group. Second place went to Centre County, third to Huntingdon County, and fourth to Chester County.

The Washington County Ritual team won the Beatty H., Dimit memorial award with the Berks County team finishing second.

Wednesday's activities were climaxed by the conferral of the sixth degree, highest in the State Grange, on a class of 257 candidates in a ceremony at the Sharon High School auditorium.

The State Grange also honored its "Granger of the Year," Albert E. Zufall, of 184 Franklin Ave., Brookville, at the convention.

Zufall, Brookville borough tax collector and former school teacher and mailman, was presented with a plague and a $25 U.S. bond during the business session of the Grange's 104th annual convention at West Middlesex High School.

Loreta Turner, a native born New Zealander who is currently staying with the Ed James family in Oxford, Pa., holds the U.S. flag to Opotike where Denise stayed, and the New Zealand flag to her home near Wellington, the capitol of New Zealand.

New Zealand

with natural dyes with the result resembling a bamboo curtain.

The skirt is called a piu-piu meaning "swing." The bodice is fashioned from a piece of tapestry on which is worked the tribal ensignia. The Maori dancer carries two poi, balls attached to strings held in the hand and used to slap the back of the hand in rhythm with the dance music.

The Maori heritage in New Zealand is recognized all over the country by the handmade and commercially made Maori symbol of fertility called the tiki. Denise and Loreta have several pieces of jewelry in jade, brass, and plastic shaped in the form of the tiki.

"It's really overdone, almost," says Denise of the commercializing of the tiki symbol.

Next to the Kiwi, the tiki is the most easily recognized symbol of New Zealand. The kiwi is the national bird and like the American bald eagle is nearly extinct and protected by the government by law. It is an odd bird with almost no wing or tail, a long, slender, curved bill, and hairlike feathers. Although most New Zealanders have never seen a live Kiwi, Denise did have the rare opportunity when an injured one was brought to a veterinarian who lived close to one of her host families. The hosts eagerly took Denise to see the treasured bird.

Of her year-long experience in New Zealand, Denise concludes that it was a marvelous experience in the Maori heritage and present day life there.

With the onset of snowy landscapes and sub-freezing temperatures in Southern Chester County, Denise and Loreta are probably looking back to a land where the cows graze in lush paddocks bordering citrus trees ripe with fruit. Brrrrrrrr- Oxford. Ahhhhhhh- New Zealand.

Egg production down in Sept.

HARRISBURG, Pa. - Pennsylvania layers produced 244 million eggs during September, two per cent less than August production and five per cent below last year, according to the Crop Reporting Service.

The September average of 12.7 million layers was also two per cent above August, but six per cent below September 1975.

Egg production per 100 layers during Septemb totaled 1,926 eggs, down fou per cent from the previous month, but one per cent above a year ago.

Lancaster Co. Society 26

Lancaster County Farm Women Society 26 met at Stauffer's of Kissel Hill on October 28 at 7 p.m. A craft workshop on scherenschnitte was taught by Janet Buchen, a society member. Scherenschnitte is German paper cutting.

A short business meeting was conducted. Ruby Esbenshade was selected as delegate to the Harrisburg Farm Show in January. Joan Hershey will be writing an essay from the Society for the county convention.

Each member of the group was asked to bring two items for the Thanksgiving baskets to be packed in November for needy families.

After the workshop was completed, all members went to Elby's Family Restaurant. Two dollars per person was taken from the Society's treasury for the meal.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Barbara Hess, 190 Stanley Avenue, Landisville. The program will be plant care by Diane Lamb from Cedar Hill Green House.

Crepes

Lettie suggests that beginning crepe cooks "don't waste time trying one that has no oil in it," because those recipes are very difficult to work with. Fortunately, the only one not containing oil is the Chinese egg roll recipe. But, unfortunately, Chinese food lovers will have to wait for their cooking expertise to improve before they can stop bringing home that delicacy from the Chinese restaurant.

The eggs in the recipes give the crepes needed elasticity, flavor, and color. Also, the liquid used can consist of almost anything, but one thing is always the same - there is usually a large amount of liquid in relation to the flour.

EQUIPMENT

Although the average housewife anticipates elaborate equipment for "fancy" foods, this is not the case with crepes.

"You really don't need special equipment," says Lettie, "all you really need are bowls, measuring equipment, and a whip, egg beater or blender. Lettie recommends using a stainless steel wire whip.

Of course, a pan is a necessity, also, but it really isn't a single-use item, so purchasing one for the crepes isn't really the same as buying special equipment. There are all kinds of crepe pans on the market, but really all that is necessary is a pan with sloping sides that conducts heat evenly throughout. The size Lettie suggests using is a six or eight inch pan. This is also a good size for omelets, so a practical idea is to buy that size pan and keep it only for those two foods.

Alletta Schadler, Lebanon County Extension home economist, demonstrates how to work with crepes.

Of course, there are also many different kinds of electric crepe makers on the market, and each has its own virtues, but Lettie says, "I would think several times before buying one that's only a one purpose piece of equipment."

"And," she continues, you are going to have to practice no matter what you use." So, as far as she is concerned, a good small saucepan is a practical investment, because "saucepans are handy for all sorts of things."

PRACTICAL USE

As was said before, crepes are good for almost any dish on a menu. There are also several advantages to cooking with crepes. First of all, they can be made ahead of the time guests arrive. Also, they are inexpensive, they can be either high or low calorie, and they can be fast or tedious to make, depending on the recipe used. On the average, a crepe contains about 65 calories, and they can be prepared in advance before using. They can also be stacked between layers of wax paper or frozen in aluminum foil if the homemaker desires. Only crepes browned on both sides should be frozen, however, since crepes done on only one side are not durable enough to stand the conditions of freezing and thawing without tearing.

Lettie also stresses that there are some definite "don'ts" with crepes. First of all, don't fill them ahead of time, and don't wait until the day the guests are to arrive to make the crepe, itself. Since they do offer the convenience of prior preparation, Lettie emphasizes using this advantage to its fullest.

PREPARATION

To make the crepes, follow the recipe, and after the batter is completely mixed, let it stand for about 30 minutes. By doing this, you will be eliminating many of the bubbles before frying. The batter should be no thicker than heavy cream as you prepare to fry the crepes.

To begin, dip a natural bristle brush in butter and grease the bottom of the fry pan with a light coat of butter. Then, pour the liquid batter into a measuring cup and at the same time have the saucepan you will be using heating on the burner. The pan should be hot enough so that the batter sets as soon as it touches the pan.

Making the crepes is actually a two-handed job. You should pour the batter from the measuring cup with one hand and work the saucepan with the other. "Working the saucepan" refers to tipping it and moving it so that the batter forms a nice circular-shaped thin pancake around the edges and slightly up the sides of the gently sloping pan. If you tip the pan improperly, the crepe will become too large, or be formed unevenly, or will turn out too thick. Most recipes make 12 - 16 crepes, so if you only get six or seven, you know that they are too thick.

As soon as the batter hits the pan, it will set, and then you simply let it brown on the one side until it is finished. According to Lettie, this is very easy to tell because when it is done, it shakes loose from the pan very easily. Once it is finished on one side, it should be flipped over and browned for a few minutes on the other side if the recipe calls for it. The second side gets browned, however, only until it forms "freckles" or brown spots - about 15 seconds.

When you are finished with the one crepe, remove it from the pan and then butter the pan again with a natural bristle brush. Then, pour, brown, shake, flip, and freckle another crepe until you are done. To store the crepes, stack each one between two pieces of wax paper. They will hold in the refrigerator this way for as long as three days. The only thing left to do at this point is fill them, and here is where the creativity comes into play.

For snacks, a good filling is shrimp, bean sprouts, soy sauce, salt and pepper put into a crepe and fried until done. The trick to rolling these crepes is to loosely roll them and adhere them together with cornstarch and water. Egg can also be used.

A Monti Christo is another way to elegantly treat guests. This particular recipe takes a finer crepe which is filled with meat or egg filling. When meat is used, the crepe is spread with mustard and thin slices of chicken roll, baked ham, and Swiss cheese. The crepe is rolled in a jelly roll fashion and dipped in beaten egg and then sauted in butter until brown.

Of course, crepes can be used for dessert, also. This is a very simple process. Dessert crepes take a sweet crepe recipe and can be filled with cherry pie filling (which has had ½ teaspoon of almond extract added to make it taste more authentic) folded over, and topped with a dab of whipped topping and a cherry. This is a delicious dessert which takes only a few seconds to make and is guaranteed to please guests any time. A practical idea for this crepe is to make it on the plate on which you plan to serve it.

If you are trying to conserve energy in your home, look to your portable appliances for some help. These appliances are designed for specific jobs so their use is often infrequent or for short periods of time, and they use less electricity than other available methods to get the same job done.

xxx

You can save energy by cooking hamburgers in an electric skillet, brewing coffee in a percolator, or popping corn in a popper rather than using your range burner. Instead of using the oven to bake a potato or a cake, the toaster-oven and fry pan will cut down on energy used.

If you have really receptive guests, you can have the crepes all prepared and placed on buffet table with several different fillings available. Then, each guest can prepare his or her own snack in the way preferred.

Crepes are also good for making vegetable dishes. For instance, broccoli or asparagus spears can be placed inside a crepe topped with Cheddar cheese and baked until prepared.

The list in endless. And, one thing Lettie Schadler points out is that when you are dreaming up all the possibilities for this food, you should remember that crepes were traditionally used as a way to make "a little food seem like a lot." So, they are a great way to use up leftovers economically.

RECIPE

The basic types of crepe recipes follow.

Classic French Crepes

2 whole eggs
2 egg yolks
1-¼ cups milk
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter

Dessert Crepes

2 whole eggs
2 yolks
1-½ cups milk
1 cup flour
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons brandy or liqueur

Fines Herbes Crepes

2 whole eggs
2 yolks
1 cup milk
1-¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon parsley, chives, and basil

Frittatine (Italian) Main Course Type

1 egg
1 yolk
½ cup water
½ cup milk
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons olive oil

Chinese (for egg rolls)

2 eggs
2 cups water
1 cup flour
2 tablespoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt

Blintes (Main course or dessert)

2 eggs
1-½ cups milk
1 cup flour
½ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons butter

General Directions

After heating a well-seasoned, greased pan so that a drop of water "bounces," pour a small amount (about two tablespoons for most pans) into the center of the pan. Tilt the pan rapidly so to spread a thin layer of batter over the bottom of the pan. Patch holes which develop with a rubber scraper dipped in batter. Let cook for 30 - 60 seconds or until crepe comes away from the pan and is browned to your taste. Sometimes you will want to turn the crepe to lightly brown the other side for 15 - 20 seconds. Other times you may not need to brown the second side.

Slide crepe onto a paper-towel-covered surface. Replace pan on unit and wipe pan with buttered paper or pastry brush dipped in butter.

Stack crepes between pieces of waxed paper up to three days in the refrigerator. To thaw, place package in preheated 300 degree F. oven for 10 minutes.

FILLINGS

Some basic fillings are:

Cannelloni Casa Grande

1½ pounds ricotta cheese
½ pound shredded Mozzarella cheese
3 egg yolks
Salt and pepper
1 pound jar spaghetti sauce
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Prepare Italian Crepes (Frittatine) browned on both sides. Mix ricotta, mozzarella, egg yolks, salt and pepper. Divide among 16 crepes. Place filling in center of crepe and roll up. Place in baking dish - seam down. Cover with sauce and Parmesan cheese. Bake for 10 to 15 minutes at 400 degrees or until heated through and topping is browned. Makes 16.

Spring Rolls with Shrimp and Bean Sprouts

½ pound cooked shrimp, cleaned, chopped
1 tablespoon sherry
1 can bean sprouts, rinsed and drained
2 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon sugar
Salt and Pepper
Cornstarch - water paste
Oil to deep-fry

Make Chinese crepes. Brown only one side. Marinate shrimp with sherry 10 minutes. Heat oil. Toss bean sprouts, shrimp and sherry for a minute. Add soy sauce, sugar, salt and pepper. Heat through. Spoon onto browned side of crepe on lower half. Fold bottom over filling. Fold over sides like an envelope. Roll up. Seal seam with cornstarch mixed with small amount of water to make a paste. Fry at 375 degrees in hot fat until crisp and brown. Makes about 20 crepes.

Monte Cristo Crepe Sandwiches

Make fines herbes crepes
Thin sliced turkey or chicken roll (slices of each for each crepe)
Thin sliced boiled or baked ham
Thin sliced Swiss cheese
Dijon-style mustard
3 beaten eggs

Make fine herbes crepes. Brown on one side only. Spread the crepes with mustard on the browned side. Top with chicken,ham and cheese. Roll up jelly roll fashion. Dip in beaten egg and brown in hot butter till brown.

NOTE: The thinner the slices, the easier this is to do and the neater the sandwiches will look.

For further information, Lettie suggests reading one or both of two books. They are Women's Day Crepe Cookbook by Sylvia Schur, and Crepe Cookery, by Mable Hoffman.

Meat production may hit record 39 billion pounds

-WASHINGTON, D. C. - Last year, 1975, U.S. commercial beef production was the highest on record. Veal production was the highest in a decade. Pork production was down sharply - the lowest since 1966. Lamb and mutton production continued their downtrend. As a result, over-all commercial red meat output was off from a year earlier, more than a billion pounds below 1971's record 37.4 billion pound total.

Things are a bit different this year.

Beef output continues at a record pace, veal output is up slightly, and pork production is on the increase. Only mutton and lamb production are down, according to USDA figures published last month.

If present trends continue, total red meat production for 1976 will have hit an all-time record high of 39 billion pounds.

Meanwhile, U.S. imports of both cattle and hogs continue up. August cattle imports, at 23,893 head, were nearly five times the Aug. 1975 total. Hog imports for the month totaled 5,238 head, double that of a year earlier.

The Jan.-Aug. totals: Cattle imports, at 521,968 head - four times that of a year earlier. Hog imports, at 32,920 - more than double that of a year earlier.

This week's suppers are soups and stews. Don't forget that on November 13, this column will feature holiday finger foods and punches to serve to your holiday guests. Then, on November 20, any and all other types of Thanksgiving recipes will be featured. The deadline for the finger foods and punches is November 6, and the other recipes have a deadline of November 13.

SWEET TOMATO SOUP
(for a quick & easy & hearty supper)

1-½ cups home canned tomatoes
2 cups whole milk (raw)
Two-thirds cup powdered milk

Heat tomatoes to boiling. Mix powdered milk with whole milk. Pour quickly into hot tomatoes. Stir with fork to mix well. Heat only to serving temperature. Do not boil after milk is added. Serve with saltine crackers. Serves two. For a different flavor, add one tablespoon butter or one teaspoon celery salt.

Note - This soup tastes sweet because the extra protein of the powdered milk neutralizes the acid and also prevents curdling. For a creamier soup, add more powdered milk.

HEARTY CHICKEN SOUP ORIENTAL

3 cups chicken broth
1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped spinach, not thawed
¾ cup sliced fresh mushrooms or 1 can (2-2 ½ oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspooon sugar
3 cups chopped cooked chicken

Combine all ingredients except chicken in saucepan; bring to boil, break spinach with fork. Add chicken; return to boil. Cover; simmer five minutes. Ladle approximately 1-½ cups into each of four soup bowls. Makes four servings.

VEGETABLE SOUP

2 pounds boiling beef
3 pounds soup bone
2 quarts cold water
1 onion, sliced
Dash salt and pepper
1-½ cups cabbage, chopped
1 cup potatoes, diced
1 cup carrots, sliced
2 cups tomatoes
2 cups green beans
1 cup celery, chopped
Parsley, chopped
¼ cup rice or noodles

Place meat and soup bone in two quarts of water. Add onion and salt. Cover; cook slowly. Add vegetables and rice or noodles and continue cooking until done. Serves six to eight.

xxx

BEAN SOUP

1 pound Navy beans
1-½ pounds pork shoulder or smoked ham bone
2 quarts water
2 tablespoons onion, chopped
Dash salt and pepper

Cover beans with water overnight. Cook beans for 10 minutes. Drain. Cover meat with two quarts of water. Add the beans, onion, salt, and peppeer. Cook until done.

xxx

POTATO SOUP

2 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons onions, chopped
2 cups potatoes, diced
4 cups hot water
Dash salt and pepper
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped

Brown the onion in butter in dutch oven. Add potatoes. Cover and cook for five minutes. Add water, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook one hour. Mix flour with two tablespoons water. Add to hot soup. Cook one minute. Add parsley. Serve hot. Serves four to six.

xxx

HAMBURGER DUMPLING STEW

1-½ pounds ground beef
Salt and pepper
Small onion
2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Mix together and make patties. Fry meat patties on both sides. Remove patties.

1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon chili sauce
1 can tomato soup
2 cups hot water.

Add these ingredients to above to make sauce. Return patties to sauce and simmer for about 20 minutes. Make dumplings from biscuit mix. Drop by spoonsful over meat and sauce and simmer 15 minutes.

SNAPPY BEEF STEW

1 envelope dry onion soup mix
2 medium potatoes, pared and cubed
1 (10-ounce) package frozen mixed vegetables
1 tablespoon all purpose flour
2 cups cubed cooked beef
2 ounces sharp process American cheese (shredded ½ cup)

Add soup mix, potatoes, and frozen vegetables to 2-¾ cups boiling water; cover and cook 10 to 12 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Mix together flour and one-fourth cup cold water; stir into vegetables. Cook and stir until slightly thickened and bubbly. Add meat; heat. Sprinkle cheese atop. Serves four to five.

xxx

BEEF STEW SUPREME

2 pounds beef cubes
6 medium sized potatoes
2 medium sized onions
6 carrots
2 ounces tomato sauce
½ cup sherry
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon paprika

Cut beef into 1-½ inch cubes. Brown and simmer on top of stove. Add enough water to cover. Boil for ½ hour. Add tomato sauce, sherry, salt, pepper and paprika and simmer for at least one hour or until done. Peel and cut vegetables, cook in salt water for 20 minutes. When meat is tender, combine with vegetables and bring to a boil. Add flour paste to thicken slightly stirring constantly. Reduce heat and cook for another five minutes.

xxx

BURGER STEW

1 pound ground beef
1 tablespoon instant onion
¼ teaspoon salt
One-eighth teaspoon pepper
1 (16-ounce) can veg-all drained
1 (20-½) ounce can tomato soup
4 oz. can mushrooms (optional)

Brown ground beef and onion. Drain, add seasonings. Stir in veg-all mixed vegetables, soup and mushrooms. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 15 minutes. Sprinkle with shredded Cheddar cheese. Serve with biscuits or instant mashed potatoes. 4-6 servings.

Mrs. Linnie M. Person

POTPOURRI

¾ pound hamburger
3 onions, coarsely chopped
2 quarts water
One-third cup barley
3 large carrots
3 potatoes
3 stems celery
1 pint tomatoes
3 teaspoons salt
Pepper to taste

Grill hamburger and remove fat. Add onions, water and barley. Simmer these ingredients while preparing vegetables. Add carrots, potatoes, and celery and cook for 45 minutes. During the last 10 minutes of cooking, add tomatoes and cook for ten more minutes.

Ladies Have You Heard?

About the Workhorse of the Kitchen

Those who know their onions know there's scarcely a meal that can't be improved on by one. So universally used, onions have become an indispensable kitchen item and a cook's best friend. Onions are also in big supply now, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture report.

Storage onions include the pungent tasting and the sweet Spanish onions. You will know the later by their size - large enough so that a middle slice fits a hamburger bun. Their skins are golden bronze to white. You may notice a faint sweet aroma about the bin which gives you a hint of the flavor to come.

When you buy onions, look them over carefully. Feel them. They should be firm with dry necks and show no sign of sprouting. Skins should be paper thin and crackle when touched. They should be free from green sunburn spots and other blemishes. Avoid onions with wet or very soft necks. These are usually signs of immaturity or decay. Also avoid onions with thick, hollow, woody centers in the neck.

When you store onions, be good to them and they'll last for quite a few weeks. Keep them in a loosely woven bag or basket to insure good air circulation around them. Store them in a cool, dark, dry and well-ventilated place. Do not refrigerate them. But once an onion has been cut, it should be placed in a plastic bag and refrigerated.

With Autumn signaling winter, there's something in the air that suggests good hearty soups. Why not try the following recipe for Onion Soup - the kind the French made famous.

ONION SOUP

4 tablespoons butter
2¼ cups thinly sliced onions
6 cups beef broth
1 teaspoon salt
one-eighth teaspoon pepper
Few grains cayenne
3 dry rolls, toasted
¾ cup grated Parmesan Cheese

Melt butter in saucepan. Add onions and cook eight minutes, or until yellow. Add broth, salt, pepper and cayenne. Cook slowly 20 minutes, or until onions are tender. Do not cover. To serve, place half a toasted roll in each of six soup plates. Top each roll with two tablespoons cheese. Fill plate with soup and serve at once. Serves 6. Beef broth may be made by dissolving six bouillon cubes in six cups boiling water.

ABOUT TIPS ON MAKING DRAPERIES

Window draperies can be an expensive investment - especially if you have them custom made. Ready-made draperies cost less, but you can't always suit your taste or the shape of your window with these. You may also end up with poor quality fabric and workmanship if you're not careful, and spend more money in the long run because they won't last.

One of the best answers to the drapery dilemma is to make your own. If you have some sewing ability, are accurate in your work and have the time and patience it takes, you can save money by making your own window hangings. Here are some ideas which can make sewing draperies easier for you.

Always make measurements with the drapery rod in place. Width of the area to be covered should be at least doubled to allow for adequate fullness. Lenghth should always be determined in reference to some structural part of the room - either the sill or apron of the window or floor.

The type of fabric you choose can affect the care and performance of your draperies. Fiberglass is one of the most popular fibers since it doesn't soil readily, can be easily washed by hand, but never by machine, and requires no ironing. But it can be hard to handle in sewing since it doesn't take a crease. Both cotton and linen perform well, but look for wrinkle-resistant finishes in them. Both should be lined to protect them from damaging sunlight.

Acrylics are easy to care for and have good resistance to sunlight. There are also many acetates, rayons and polyesters to choose from - all with their own special characteristics. Blends of different fibers will tend to take on the properties of the fibers used in the largest proportions. Special finishes provide soil-and wrinkle-resistance. Be sure to read the labels for information about the fabric and its care before you make your selection.

Lined draperies will wear longer, give a heavier, richer appearance and look better from the outside of the house. They do cost more to make and will require dry cleaning. If you are afraid to tackle lined drapes because they look too complicated, write or call the Lancaster County Extension Office for free printed instruction. Farm Women Societies

Sixteen members and seven guests of Berks County Farm Women Group 5 toured LaConca D'Oro Inc., Bethel, Pa.

A meeting was then held at the home of Mrs. Jane Sattazahn, Womelsdorf R1.

President Rhea Schoener conducted the business meeting. November 11 is Berks Heim Bingo. Other dates of importance are: November 13 - Hoe Down sponsored by the group at the Stouchsburg Fire Hall from 8 to 11. Music will be by the Boyds. Door prizes will be awarded and winners of the Bicentennial quilt tickets will be announced.

November 14 is Men's Night to the held at the Magic Carpet, 6th and Willow St., Lebanon, Pa. at 7 p.m.

Lancaster Co. Society 28

The October meeting of Lancaster County Farm Women Society 28 was held on October 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Melvin Zimmerman, Shenk Avenue, Strasburg. Mrs. Richard Hess served as co-hostess. Mrs. Christ Landis was in charge of devotions.

The Ways and Means Committee reported on the final plans for the sub sale held on October 27.

Fifty dollars was donated to the family of Dale Mallory, a leukemia victim who died recently. Members were also asked to donate blood in Dale's behalf at either the Lancaster General or the St. Joseph's Hospital.

President Mrs. William Harnish read a resume on Mrs. Melvin Zimmerman and Mrs. Robert Book.

Mrs. Kenneth Kreider will represent Society 28 in the essay contest at the county convention on November 6.

The speaker for the evening was Doris Thomas, home economist for the Penn State Extension Service in Lancaster County. Her theme was "Safety in the Home."

The next meeting will be held on November 18 at the home of Mrs. William Dean, Strasburg R1. Mrs. Jerchan of Christ's home in Paradise will be speaker.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

November is a bleak month of the year as most of the leaves have come clattering to the ground. Some mornings they sound like rain as they fall on other brittle leaves already off of the trees.

We have four birthdates to celebrate within six weeks in the fall and that helps to liven things up as we prepare special meals and decorate birthday cakes. When I realize that several of our children are now in their twenties, I'm really glad that we still have teenagers at home. They keep up going and don't allow us to settle into middle-age too comfortably. We must provide transportation for music lessons, swimming lessons, and meetings and never really know what demands the next day will bring. Thus, we keep on the "move" and life is interesting and even exciting at times.

It is the one thing that I wish could be overcome in growing older - the fact that one is restricted in movement. Many of todays old folks never learned to drive a car but depended on a husband or friend to take them away. No longer can someone hitch up a horse and leave them visit a neigbor - the traffic is terrific.

Therefore, they must stay in their home or room until a busy younger person comes to take them to the doctor, to the store, to the bank or even to vote. We are glad to be of service but it isn't a happy thought to realize that someday our own mobility will depend on others.

Lancaster Co. Society 11

Lancaster County Farm Women Society 11 held their regular meeting on Oct. 28, at 1:30 p.m. in the social room of the Quarryville Methodist Church. The meeting was opened by the vice president, Dorothy Huber.

Roll call was answered by 22 members and two guests.

The business meeting was taken charge of by the president, Violet Eshelman. Minutes and Treasurers report were given and approved.

Sunshine Committee and bus trip reports were given. The following officers were elected: president-Violet Eshelman, Vice-president-Dorothy Huber; recording secretary - Margaret Swarr; corresponding secretary - Mary E. Swarr; treasurer, Esther Wood.

Arrangements were completed for attending the county convention and for having a Bazaar Table at the Christmas Party.

The program was a craft show and demonstration by Mrs. Robert Bucher. Many clever and beautiful articles were displayed and the construction method explained.

The November meeting will be on Nov. 18 at the home of Mrs. Betty Burkins. There will be a cookie exchange.

Film released

HARRISBURG, Pa. - Great numbers of women have had to seek employment when their husbands lost jobs, or because runaway inflation has made it necessary for both heads of the household to work to cover expenses, according to Marie R. Keeney, director of the Pennsylvania Commission for Women. In addition, she said, an increasing number of women are heads of households and the sole breadwinners for their families.

Because of this, the Commission for Women has just released a 26-minute documentary film, "Why Not a Woman?" which portrays women on the job in the skilled crafts and trades - an employment area which has long been considered "for men only."

"We made that film to open up more opportunities for women in non-traditional occupations," explained Keeney, "and we intend to continue that effort." For further information contact Judy Hausen, 717-787-8128.

Correspondence course offered

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. - Your figure and your future - yours and your family's - relates in large part to the food served in the home. A Penn State correspondence course emphasizes meal planning for young homemakers and how to relate good nutrition to wise spending of both dollars and calories.

Lessons are directed toward the planning and serving of more nutritious meals, making the best use of time and money to help homemakers, husbands, and children develop good food habits. Part of this six-lesson course emphasizes reliable sources to look to for accurate nutrition information.

To obtain a copy of the course, write MEAL PLANNING, Box 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make your check for $3.50 payable to Penn State.

Combine elegance with traditional Thanksgiving meal

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. - Families observe Thanksgiving in different ways. For some, it means sharing a bounty of good food with lots of friends and relatives in a simple, casual way. For others it means elegance with food served from a table set with the finest china, glassware and linen. The same warm feelings toward others can prevail, regardless of the situation.

If the group isn't too large maybe this is the year for elegance. Set the table with fine china, glassware and flatware. Dress up the table with an attractive centerpiece and place cards children can make.

Serve the meal with elegance, too. Serve appetizers in the living room first. Then move to the dining room for the main course. Pass bowls of food around the table country style. Or use compromise service where meats and vegetables are served onto dinner plates by the host or hostess from bowls and platters. The food is served from the place where the host or hostess sits and filled plates are passed from hand to hand until all have been served.

Don't forget that children are an important part of tradition. Let them in on the elegance of dining, too. They need to learn to feel comfortable about elegant dining. And they'll like the opportunity to help in the serving of the food, too.

Hogs preferred to job in town

By JERRY WEBB
Agricultural Editor
Cooperative Extension Service

LAUREL, Del. - Pork production is not a major farm enterprise in Delaware, accounting for no more than three per cent of total farm income. But that's still almost $9 million yearly.

Some farmers who used to raise hogs in the woods made the transition - others fell by the way. Louis O'Neal, who farms with his father Manning east of here, is one of those hogmen who made the switch. And like most successful producers he got bigger and better in the process - farrowing as many as 1600 pigs a year and finishing as many as 1200 high quality crossbred porkers.

Louis O'Neal's story starts like that of a lot of other young Delaware farmers. He was a farm boy who wanted to stay on the farm. So when he finished high school back in 1955, Dad increased the tempo of farming activities and made room for him. That meant building another home and increasing the income potential from the 250 acre farming operation.

Broilers had been a part of Manning O'Neal's operations, so expansion in that direction was relatively easy. Father and son have modern broiler houses operated as separate enterprises, each turning out up to 200,000 birds annually.

But chickens and 250 acres of crops didn't prove to be enough to keep these two busy.

Louis tried off-farm work a couple of times and didn't really like. He preferred to stay on the farm. So it was decided to intensify the hog operation started in 1967 - make it the main business of the partners. At that point it was strictly feeder pigs in the woods. But once a year marketing, labor problems and the need to expand convinced them that large scale confinement production was the only way to go. That meant a big capital outlay and a long term commitment to confinement hog production.

The O'Neals sought the best information they could get on the direction of the future and then in 1973 set out to build a unit that would be suitable. They checked with other farmers, went to meetings and on tours. One of their sources of help was the Cooperative Extension Service in the form of Sussex County agent William Henderson, a long-time advocate of confinement production, and Dr. Richard Fowler, Extension livestock specialist.

Although there are similarities between the broiler business and confinement hog production, there are also big differences. Part of Fowler's job was to make sure the father-son team understood this and was up to the management challenge that lay ahead.

Once that was done it was a fairly simple, though expensive, matter to come up with the physical arrangements.

The O'Neal operation involves 80-100 sows farrowing twice a year in a 26 sow farrowing unit. Breeding is spread out so there is a steady supply of pigs for the 350 pgi nursery unit and the 250 pig finishing unit.

Depending on the season, the number of pigs weaned per sow and the number of sows on hand, O'Neal can have an oversupply of 40 pound pigs ready for the finishing floor. The extras, about 400 a year, are sold at feeder pig auctions while the remaining 1200 are fed on the farm.

When the farrowing is over the sows go out to pasture, are given some grain as needed and are sheltered in low cost, movable sheds. Electric fences provide control and allow the sows to be moved to clean ground as necessary.

The farrowing and finishing houses are marvels of pig comfort and labor efficiency. There are no windows - fans provide controlled atmosphere, heat lamps warm the baby pigs. Manure falls through slats into underground holding tanks. All feeding and watering is done mechanically from a central control panel. In fact, most routine medication is done through the watering system by means of an access nozzle at the control panel.

Manure handling, traditionally one of the most difficult and unpleasant jobs on a hog farm, has been reduced to a simple spreading task every three months. The manure is pumped into a special tank wagon and is distributed directly into the soil through chisel plow attachmentts.

The O'Neals raise most of their own feed - corn and soybeans - and have their own mixing mill. They do buy some grain - mostly as a safeguard in case their own crop yields are down.

Louis O'Neal is active in the Delaware Pork Producers Association and knows how to raise quality hogs. He follows a crossbreeding program, including Yorkshires and Hampshires, and is looking for some good Landrace boars to improve the finishing qualities of the crossbreds currently in use. He knows the packers require a lean meaty hog that will yield 55 to 60 per cent of its live weight in the three prime cuts - shoulders, loins and hams. Packers also want a minimum of backfat - no more than one inch - and will penalize producers who bring in hogs that don't meet the test. In fact, some packers just won't accept the old style hogs - demanding the modern crossbreds such as those Louis O'Neal produces.

Consumers have been the ultimate winner in this hog carcass change. They get more meat for their money and if they know how to cook it, they can get nutrition and flavor that rivals any other meat choice. Louis and Manning O'Neal and a few other top producers have also benefited. They now have a steady, reliable market and fairly favorable prices for their hogs. And because of that, they're in the hog business to stay.

Meat product labels 'deceptive'

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Products called "chicken frankfurter" and "turkey ham" are deceptive to consumers and unfairly use the hard-won reputation of traditional red meat products, the American Meat Institute has told the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The Department is seeking comments on proposed standards for various poultry sausage products by Nov. 24.

Sausage products made from red meats - beef, pork, lamb and veal - have a long history of popularity through their inherent superiority and through the promotional investments made by livestock farmers, manufacturers and associations. If there is a place for poultry products in the market, the poultry industry should carry the burden of establishing consumer acceptance through its own product names, the Institute said.

The Institute summarized results of a consumer attitude study it commissioned from an independent market research firm, Homemaker Testing, Inc. Using well-established sampling procedures, this company conducted telephone interviews with the main food buyer in households during mid-September to mid-October.

Results of the survey showed that 100 per cent of the respondents view "ham" as a form of pork; 79 per cent said that "turkey ham" would be a combination of turkey and ham; 95 per cent said that hot dogs were made from beef and-or pork. In addition, while 88 per cent said that a product labeled "chicken hot dog" would contain some form of chicken, just 28 per cent thought it would contain only chicken; 45 per cent expected a combination of ingredients and 27 per cent were so confused by the term that they didn't know what it meant.

"In conducting this preliminary study, we have undertaken to provide information of the kind that USDA traditionally has considered essential before approving a product name. We believe that the Department needs to know more about what the various product names involved mean to consumers before it legalizes their use by manufacturers of products containing no red meat," the Institute said.

"We realize that some of these poultry sausages have been produced in recent years without benefit of published standards. In our view, the approval of these labels was a mistake, and that approval in no way should be taken as industry acquiescence in the present apparent effort to legitimize these products."

The American Meat Institute is the national association of meat packers and processors.

To determine total field loss in a corn field, two kinds of counts are necessary: (1) a count of the number of kernels fallen and (2) a count of the number of ears left on the ground. Twenty kernels per 10 square feet equal one bushel loss per acre. Each three-quarter-pound ear left in 1-100 acre equals a bushel loss per acre.

Excessive corn harvest losses occur for several reasons: poor harvest timing, improper machine speed, poor machine adjustment and down corn. Timing in relation to kernel moisture is very important. Agricultural engineers at the University of Delaware say that a moisture content of 24 to 25 percent gives the least field loss. Losses rise sharply as corn dries further.

$20 per acre saved by harvesting soybeans properly

Newark, Del. - Soybean growers can add as much as $20 per acre to their returns this fall through better harvest management. Tom Williams, Extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware, says the average soybean grower loses as much as three bushels per acre through poor harvest management.

Here are some steps Williams recommends to assure a more profitable soybean harvest:

1. Begin harvesting when soybean seed moisture reaches 14 per cent. Shatter losses increase markedly when moisture levels drop below 11.5 per cent.
2. Harvest at an average combine speed between 2.5 and 3 miles per hour. Combines operate most efficiently at that range - and the cutter bar is allowed to ride down for maximum cut.
3. Count lost soybeans already on the ground before harvest; pre-harvest losses should not be charged against combining. Four beans per square foot indicate a bushel lost per acre.
4. Match ground speed to combine reel speed. Best speed ratio is a reel speed of 1.25 times the combine ground speed.
5. Cut soybeans as close to the ground as possible. The goal is to harvest all the pods - even the very lowest. Tests show a 10 per cent reduction in harvest losses when soybeans are cut at 2 ½ inches.
6. Measure soybean losses from cutting, gathering and threshing operations to pinpoint necessary adjustments.
7. Continually adjust the combine to changing crop conditions.

PFA outlines convention program

GETTYSBURG, Pa. - Farming has become more than just a way of life. It's a business and more than 1,000 farmers will be here this week to take care of the business end of farming.

The 26th annual meeting and convention of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) will be held here at the Sheraton International Inn, starting Sunday (Nov. 7) and closing Wednesday (Nov. 10) with the adoption of policy positions and election of officers. The state association has 20,313 family members.

"Farmers are not able to just stay at home and farm," says PFA President John R. Pitzer, an Aspers fruit grower. "Too many things outside the realm of farming affect the ways and means by which the farmer produces food and fiber for the consumers."

The farm leader said that one of the major issues that seems to be surfacing in the policy development sessions is government regulations. "What we should call it is over-regulation," Pitzer said.

"One of the suggestions is putting the U. S. Congress and the Pennsylvania General Assembly back in control of agency regulations," he remarked. "To often laws are passed by a legislative body and forgotten while some government agencies outline the rules for administering the law. These rules are called regulations and seem to go way beyond the intentions of the lawmakers who passed the law in the first place. We want legislative control over the regulation process."

Pitzer has been president of the state's largest general farm organization for eight years. His term as president expires this year and he'll need to run for re-election if he wants to continue as the association's leader.

The convention officially opens tomorrow evening (7:30 p.m.) with the traditional vespers service with the Rev. Lawrence Lykens, pastor of the Camp Curtin Memorial United Methodist Church, Harrisburg, as the speaker.

The student ensemble from Gettysburg Seminary will also participate in this service.

The 150-member delegate body will hold their first session Monday at 8:30 p.m. The delegates will be going over suggested policies from 53 county associations, and the policies will be presented Wednesday afternoon for approval at the group's annual business session.

Murray Miles, information director, Tennessee Farm Bureau Federation, will be the keynote speaker at a noon luncheon Monday.

Later in the (2 p.m.) an affiliate service conference will be held featuring Charles R. Dull, manager, Pennsylvania Agricultural Cooperative Marketing Association; William Deeds, manager, PFA Insurance Service; Charles H. Mohn, manager, PFA Supply Division; Richard E. Denison, manager, Farm Management and Business Anaylsis Service; Jack Armstrong, deputy administrator, USDA Farmers' Cooperative Service, and Noel Stuckman, manager, Michigan Agricultural Cooperative Association.

A talent contest and square dance will be featured at 6:45 p.m. Monday.

President John Pitzer will give his annual report at 7:40 a.m. Tuesday, followed by group tours to the fruit industry area and the Gettysburg battle field.

At a membership luncheon (12 noon) counties with membership goal will be recognized for outstanding achievement.

The PFA women's conference will be held at 3 p.m. PFA Women's Committee chairman, Mrs. Charles Benner, will give her annual report.

Miss Jean Werts, women's activities director, Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, will conduct a workshop on how to organize and operate a successful women's program.

The PFA Member Service Corp., an affiliate of the membership organization, will hold its annual meeting Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, will be the speaker at the annual awards banquet at 6:45 p.m. Tuesday. County associations will be presented plaques and cash awards for outstanding performance in different program areas.

Wednesday will conclude the four-day convention with an annual report from Charles R. Ord, PFA administrative secretary, at 7:40 a.m.

Following Ord's report, the PFA Women's Committee will hold its annual business meeting at 9:30 a.m.

The annual business meeting will commence at 12:30 p.m. climaxing in the election of officers and adoption of policies for 1977.

Here are the major activities for each day:

Sunday, November 7 - 7:30 p.m. vespers service, with the Rev. Lawrence Lykens, pastor, Camp Curtin Memorial United Methodist Church, Harrisburg, as the speaker.

Monday, November 8 - 8:30 a.m. voting delegate session; 12 noon, opening luncheon with Murray Miles, information director, Tennessee Farm Bureau Federation, as the speaker; 2 p.m. affiliate service conference with addresses by Charles R. Dull, manager, Pennsylvania Agricultural Cooperative Marketing Association; William Deeds, manager, PFA Insurance Service; Charles H. Mohn, manager, PFA Supply Division; Richard E. Denison, manager, Farm Management and Business Analysis Service; Jack Armstrong, deputy administrator, USDA's Farmers' Cooperative Service; and Noel Stuckman, manager, Michigan Agricultural Cooperative Marketing Association.

Tuesday, November 9 - 7 a.m., report by John R. Pitzer, PFA president; 12 noon, membership luncheon; 3 p.m. women's conference with Mrs. Charles Benner, PFA women's committee chairman, and Miss Jean Werts, women's activities director, Ohio Farm Bureau Federation as the speakers; 4:30 p.m., county presidents' conference, 6:45 p.m., awards banquet with Allen Grant, president, American Farm Bureau Federation as the speaker.

Wednesday, November 10 - 7:40 a.m., report by Charles R. Ord, PFA administrative secretary; 9 a.m., voting delegate session; 9:30 a.m., PFA women's committee meeting; 12:30 p.m., PFA annual Business meeting.

Cutting out meat won't ease world food problems

SIOUX CITY, Iowa - Eliminating or dramatically reducing meat consumption in America to provide more food for the world, is a misleading, over-simplification of the world food problem, a meat industry leader said here last month at the Mid-western Conference on Food and Social Policy.

"Using guilt to tap the genuine feelings of altruism and brotherhood, which most Americans hold, will not make any contribution toward easing the world food crisis," said National Live Stock and Meat Board President David H. Stroud.

Stroud defended the production of cattle, hogs and sheep, including those which are grain-fed, as an efficient, not wasteful, utilization of resources to produce food.

"The eat-less-so-others-will-have-more concept disregards the realities which have made U.S. agriculture the most efficient food producer for this country and the world," Stroud said. "Top among those realities is the fact that any reduction in meat consumption will only send negative economic signals back through the economic system, resulting in an overall reduction of both meat and grain supplies."

He said America became "the food producing wonder of the world" on the basis of individual enterprise, profits (or hope for them), pride in land ownership and maximum achievement through efficiencies based on scientific research and sophisticated technology.

"When one studies the agriculture of the underdeveloped and starving nations, one constant is found, a low per capita productivity. Even the growing population problem is but a complicating factor to the productivity problem," said Stroud.

The livestock and meat industry executive said the answer to the world food problem is to aid other nations to boost their own productivity. He stated that necessary social and political reform within various countries should encourage production and place a higher status on the efforts of farmers.

He also said that livestock are far more efficient at converting grain to meat than many industry critics contend.

"I'd like to put to rest the absurd notion that livestock require 16 pounds or 21 pounds of grain to produce one pound of meat. That is a ridiculous figure," Stroud said. Cattle, over their lifespan, average about a 3 to 1 ratio, hogs are also about 3 to 1 and sheep can reach Good and Choice grades without receiving any grain at all, according to Meat Board scientists.

American Egg Board releases cooperative funding applications

PARK RIDGE, Ill. - Applications, guidelines, and criteria for the new state cooperative funding program were mailed by American Egg Board October 26 to all state association leaders or other state contracts of record.

The cooperative funding criteria were approved by the AEB Board at the Fall meeting.

To be eligible for a portion of the funding available through this program, state proposals must:

1. Constitute a specific identifiable promotional effort rather than general support for a total program.
2. Be more efficient to pursue at a state or regional level than at a national level.
3. Place emphasis on additional or expanded promotional programs.
4. Be consistent with the national effort.
5. Promote eggs in general, not individual brands or states.

Proposals which meet the criteria established by the Board should be submitted to the AEB office according to the format established by AEB so that proposals can be compared on an equal basis. To be considered for 1977 funding, applications must be submitted to the AEB office by December 15, 1976. Anyone who has not received an application and would like to apply for cooperative funding should contact the AEB office, 205 Touhy, Park Ridge, Il 60068.

Open house at Maryland bull stud

FREDERICK, Md. - The 1976 Maryland Artificial Breeding Cooperative annual meeting and open house was held here on October 14.

Featured speaker, Dr. Clinton E. Meadows, Dairy Extension specialist from Michigan State University, presented a talk on "Improving Dairy Herd Replacements". He stressed the value of official testing, proper identification and proper feeding. He also recommended the use of several different sample sires for up to 30 per cent of a herd's breedings.

Two dairy industry contemporaries, J. Herbert Snyder and Henry R. Shoemaker, 81, were honored by the Maryland Dairy Shrine at its meeting.

Shoemaker is the first county Extension agent - active or retired - to receive official recognition from the Maryland Dairy Shrine. He was with Extension for 37 years.

J. Herbert Snyder of Walkersville, died on May 9, 1976, just 10 days short of his 74th birthday. He was well-known in former years as a dairy farmer, Guernsey cattle breeder, author, Grange leader, and general manager of the Frederick Production Credit Association, a farmer-owned lending organization operating in four major dairy-farm counties of Central Maryland.

Both Snyder annd Shoemaker were active supporters of the Maryland Artificial Breeding Cooperative and assisted in establishment of the organization's bull stud north of Frederick, now a part of Sire Power, Inc.

Maryland ABC technician William Pippin was named technician of the year. Since he began breeding cows for Maryland ABC in 1958, he has averaged over 2400 first service breedings per year. Last year he bred nearly 3000 cows in the Bay Area. Other technicians recognized were Dave Patrick, Warren Thompson, Lewis Dixon, Frank Fogle, Wilber Iley, A. Lloyd Greene, Edward Kauffman III, Robert Pippin, Paul Dodson and Wayne Sprout. The awards program was not completed until W. Lewis "Lew" Campbell and Robert E. "Buck" Shaeffer received their belated NAAB (National Association of Animal Breeders) "25 Year Service" awards.

Swine embargo erased

HARRISBURG - Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Raymond J. Kerstetter has announced that all embargo restrictions imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania against the movement of swine from the state of New Jersey into the Commonwealth are revoked, effective November 1, 1976.

With the release of the embargo, all classes of swine from the state of New Jersey may move through all marketing channels within the Commonwealth, provided they meet Pennsylvania's swine import requirements.

An embargo on New Jersey swine has been in effect since August 3 when an outbreak of hog cholera was reported on a Belleplain farm. The embargo was modified August 16 and September 8.

A modified swine embargo is still in effect against swine from Massachusetts. Embargoes on New Hampshire and Rhode Island swine were previously released.

According to Secretary Kerstetter, Pennsylvania has had no reported cases of hog cholera and the disease appears to have been contained in the other states by state and federal officials.

Hog cholera cannot be transmitted to other animals or humans, but is extremely contagious among swine and is usually fatal.

By DIETER KRIEG

TIMONIUM, Md. - Penn State University's renowned master of beef cattle, Herman Purdy, circled five trios of top animals, all the while focusing his sharp eyes on their characteristics. All of the entries in the ring were champions in their own right. At stake was the honor of being "champion of champions." Symbolic of that honor is the Agnes Tilghman trophy, a large silver plate which measures over two feet in length and 17 inches wide. It's presented here annually at the conclusion of the Eastern National Livestock Show.

Purdy, with hands in his pockets, skirted the champion trios for no more than a couple of minutes. An official at ringside explained that it doesn't take a man like Purdy long to pick out the best.

Stepping up to the microphone, Purdy announced that all 15 of the animals before him showed "economically important traits." Continuing his reasoning, he said "They all have size, thickness, growth, and have done well - it's a little difficult to try and compare breeds. But after having studied all three individuals, the Charolais have to win it again."

T. Courtney Jenkins, chairman of the board of directors for the ENLS, presented the large silver plate to Riverwood Farms, of Powell Ohio. It was the second year in a row that the Midwestern Charolais farm won the high honor.

The Agnes Tilghman trophy was produced about six years ago in memory of a Hereford breeder by the same name who had the oldest continuous Hereford herd in the United States at that time. Mrs. Tilghman had her herd on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. The trophy named in her honor and memory rotates annually to the exhibitor who showed the very finest cattle at the ENLS. Since its origination in 1971, Purdy

Build your own pre-starter ration for half the cost.

Feed Creep Wean No. 3

If you're in the business of farrowing pigs, there is only one sure way to save on feed costs — right from the start. That's why Vigortone developed Creep Wean No. 3.

This highly fortified pre-mix makes it possible for you to build your own 18% pre-starter ration for about half the cost of a commercial product.

You'll be surprised how much easier it is to get baby pigs on feed fast with this freshly ground ration and how trouble free they stay right on through weaning.

Save big on Vigortone's starter, growing and finishing rations, too.

The reasons for the superior performance of Vigortone fortified corn-soy rations are simple: the pigs are assured the essential balance of amino acids and the proper levels of major minerals, trace minerals and vitamins all the way to market; and you only pay out-of-pocket for ingredients you don't grow on your own farm.

Better feed conversion means lower cost

Each Vigortone corn-soy feeding program has been designed to promote better feed conversion and lower costs. If you'd like more information, see your nearest Vigortone serviceman soon.

has served as judge for the prestigious event. Purdy himself has a herd of beef cattle in Huntingdon County, Pa. and is retired professor of animal science. While at Penn State he coached numerous first-place judging teams, and advanced the University's beef program to national recognition.

Other portions of the ENLS were judged by Roger Hundsley of Purdue University.

Jenkins, a Shorthorn breeder from around Reisterstown, Md., described this year's ENLS as a "super show." Acknowledging that the number of cattle shown was down, he pointed out that the quality of all breeds was up. "Last year," he said, "we had the National Charolais Show here as well as the Register of Merit Polled Hereford Show. They rotate around annually from one place to another," he explained.

The ENLS was held here at the Timonium Fairgrounds Oct. 27-31, with exhibitors coming from all over the eastern portion of the United States. The show's regular drawing area includes all states east of the Mississippi River, although some animals are also shown from Texas and the Great Plains states.

Aside from beef cattle, the show also includes competitive events for swine and sheep. Billed as "an educational forum for livestock professionals and farm youth, as well as a learning experience for metropolitan youngsters and their families," the ENLS is one of the top shows of its kind. It was organized in 1947 by livestock representatives on the East Coast and operates as a non-profit educational organization to encourage efficient meat production. FFA and 4-H projects are well represented, with those groups accounting for more than half of all the events scheduled.

Support for the show comes entirely from tax-free contributions made by individuals, corporations and foundations, plus grants received from the Maryland State Fair Board and Baltimore County, say ENLS officials.

New Jersey dairymen plan joint meetings

FLEMINGTON, N. J. - A joint annual meeting of two dairy farmer organizations, the Central Jersey Holstein Association and the Central Jersey DHIA, has been scheduled for Friday evening, November 19, at Stanton Grange Hall. The affair will begin at 7 pm with a baked chicken dinner, a specialty of the ladies and men of Stanton Grange, according to Mrs. Norma Norz, Neshanic, a co-chairman for the planning committee.

Brief business meetings will be conducted by the presidents of both organizations, William Teets, Lebanon, for the Holstein Association, and John R. Everett, Somerville, for DHIA. Elections of directors, financial reports, and reports of activities will be on the agenda.

Entertainment will follow the business meetings.

Certificates indicating high levels of herd production will be presented during the program. Also high life-time production cows will be honored with the presentation of certificates.

The Central Jersey Holstein Association includes 65 members, breeders and others interested in the promotion of registered Holstein cattle in Hunterdon, Somerset, northern Mercer Counties.

The Central Jersey Dairy Herd Improvement Association is a farmers' cooperative which provides a production testing service to its members through a paid staff. The association members pay for this service which includes monthly computerized reports indicating the production and the efficiency fof the participating dairy herds. The local DHIA includes dairymen from Hunterdon Somerset and northern Mercer. representing 55 dairy cow and goat herds.

The DHIA has a memorandum of understanding with the Extension Service, Cook College, and the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. All work closely in carrying out the production testing program. About 40 per cent of the cows in the area are on this production testing program.

Tickets for the dinner meeting are available from the DHIA supervisors, Holstein directors, and in the Hunterdon County Extension Service Office, Rt 31, north of Flemington.

At today's prices, corn harvest losses can amount to a sizeable percentage of the cash cost of producing your crop. These losses can range anywhere from 2.3 bushels to as high as 30 bushels an acre, says University of Delaware extension crops marketing specialist, Carl German.

xxx

Most agricultural engineers agree that losses of five per cent or less indicate satisfactory harvesting performance. Generally speaking, picker losses tend to exceed those of combines. When you take the bushels lost in excess of five percent, and multiply them times the price per bushel of corn, the amount can be sizeable. An excess loss of six bushels an acre, for example, with corn worth $2.50 a bushel is like throwing $15 down the drain. Multiply that loss times 100 acres and it's cost you $1500.

Maryland soils team wins 9 straight

COLLEGE PARK, Md. - The soil judging team from the University of Maryland's agronomy department recently captured the Northeast regional collegiate soil judging championship for the ninth consecutive year.

Three teams from the College Park campus finished first, second and fourth among 20 teams from seven colleges and universities to again assure the school championship for Maryland.

This year's eighteenth annual contest was held in Maryland, with practice locations on both sides of the Chesapeake Bay. Actual contest site was near Cumberstone, on the grounds of the Smithsonian Institution's Chesapeake Bay Center for Environmental Studies, north of Galesville on the south shore of the Rhode river.

Two members of Maryland's "B" team finished first and third in the individual standings, and the four members of the "A" team captured fourth through seventh spots.

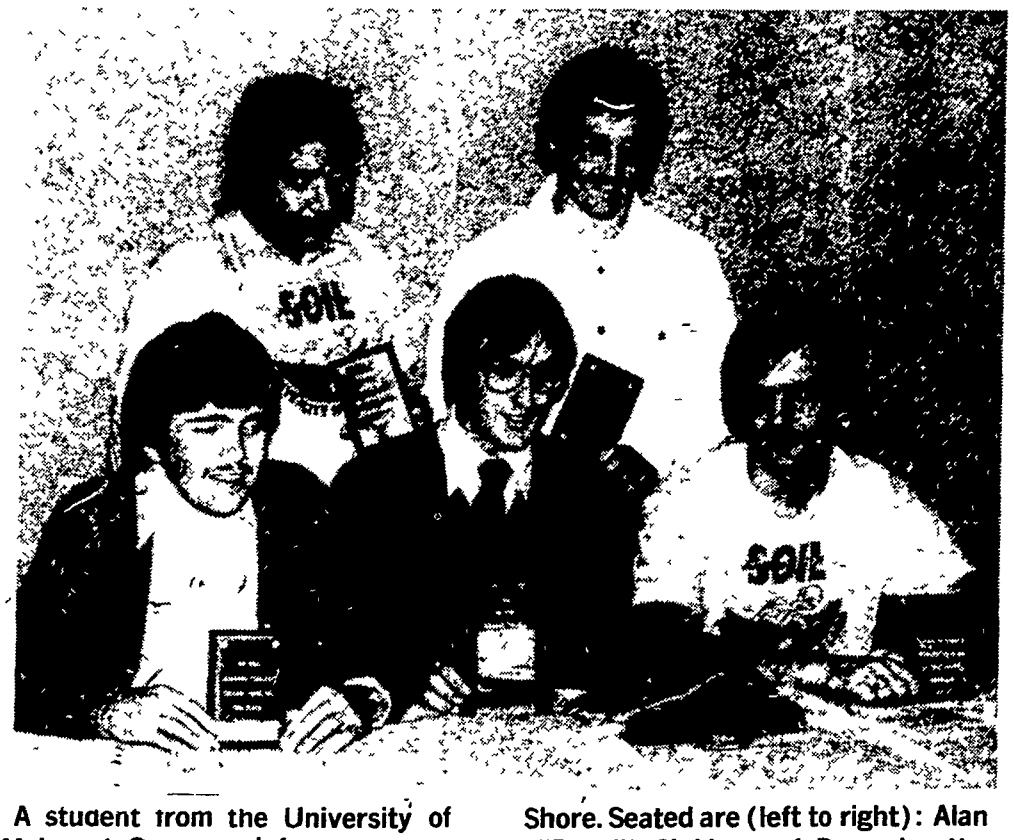
Third through seventh-place individuals, respectively, were as follows: William J. McMahon of Kensington, Byron D. Huang from the Aspen Hill-Glenmont area of Wheaton, Wayne M. Maresch of Laurel, Scott R. Stanley from the Belair Town section of Bowie, and M. Kathleen Huey of Galena.



A student from the University of Maine at Orono and four representatives from the University of Maryland at College Park had a lesson on live snapping turtles following the Northeast regional collegiate soil judging contest held in Maryland on Oct. 16. The quintet posed with a representative of the Maryland sports mascot following an awards banquet at the Wye Institute near Queenstown on the Eastern Shore. Seated are (left to right): Alan ("Buzz") Pinkham of Damariscotta, Maine, who placed second in the soil judging contest; Michael J. Fisher of Cockeysville, first-place individual, and William J. McMahon of Kensington, who placed third. Standing are (left to right): Byron D. Huang of Wheaton, who was fifth-place individual. The University of Maryland easily won the championship, and the University of Maine finished second.

Second-place individual in the contest was Alan Pinkham of Damariscotta, Maine.

Pinkham helped lead the Maine team to a second-place finish in the school standings - the highest placing in several years for a team from the Pine Tree State. Main is scheduled to host the 1977 Northeast regional collegiate soil-judging contest.

Delaware Valley College of Doylestown, Pa., repeated its third-place standing of a year ago in this year's regional contest; the University of Rhode Island was fourth, and Penn State came in fifth. Teams from Cornell and Rutgers also participated.

Coaching this year's Maryland soil judging teams was a pair of Montgomery County residents - Dr. Fred P. Miller of Colesville, a professor of agronomy at the College Park campus, and his assistant, Mary S. Patterson of Potomac, a graduate student in soils. Miss Patterson had been the top individual in both the 1973 and 1974 Northeast regional collegiate soil judging contests.

York Mall display celebrates National Farm Wife Month

YORK, Pa. - The York County farm woman is a diversely active lady on the farm, off the farm, and in many special ways. The truth of this statement will be evident at the York Mall Nov. 12 and 13 in celebratiion of National Farm Wife Month.

Sponsored by York County Farmers' Association, the event will be a colorful array of country crafts displayed and demonstrated by women who will be available to talk farm philosophy and facts to non-farm counterparts on a woman to woman, person to person level.

The commodity craft section will feature a milk carton container village, painted milk cans, egg carton crafts, egg shell plantings, pumpkin painting, peach crafts, dried apple dolls, corn cob and corn husk dolls, and wreaths as well as wine making and canned goods highlighted by homemade sauerkraut and catsup.

In the country craft corner, quilting will be demonstrated on the quilting racks; and painting demonstrations will be held as well as dried flower arranging and gingham flower making. Apple cutting sculpture and sand art, decoupage, cake decorating, crewel and needle point, basket weaving, Rya weaving, pine cone craft, and Christmas items will brighten up the mall. Pieces of refinished furniture will hold display items.

Since farmers, especially the females, are big savers, a special section on recycled farm junk will catch the eye of ecology buffs. Twine wreaths, a peach crate doll house, bottle dolls, acryllic preserved peach pits and other items make up a fanciful exhibit.

Country kids will come to life in color slide presentations, while the awareness of God's Greatness will be captured in a montage of country landscape pictures. Cartoon blow-ups of familiar humorous farm wife situations will add hilarity to the exhibition

The farm wife's worth will be graphically shown on a hat rack with price tags on all the many hats she wears throughout the year The evolution from Indian woman farmer to modern day farm wife freed from the drudgery of the past will give an historic overview to her present life.

Chairman Gail McPherson will be working with the York County Farmers' Association Women's Committee and area farm women Phyllis and Ethel Gross, Darlene Godfrey, Shirley Hess, Miriam Waltrmyer, Melba Dise, Hilda Arendt, Mildred Jackson, Barbara Hoffmaster, Alma and Gladys Taylor, Gretna McCleary, Eva Waltemyer, Marge Rutter, Kay Taylor, Kathy King, Ailean and Susan Detter, Carolyn Rutter, Betty Marsteller, Doris Moore, Beverly Morris, Mary Marsteller, Connie Wolf, Flora Wiley, Edith McDonald, and women from the McKendree United Methodist Church.

Eastern Milk Producers call for floor under Class I price

SYRACUSE, N.Y. - At its annual fall meeting on October 27, here, over 200 delegates, representing 7500 dairy farmer members of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative, passed a resolution calling for the establishment of a "floor" under Class 1 (fluid) milk prices. This action was taken in an effort to stabilize sagging prices payable to dairymen this Winter and to offset further inflationary costs of production.

During a special meeting of Eastern's board of directors on the following day, the resolution was ratified and a petition was mailed to the U. S. Secretary of Agriculture. In an effort to gain support in this matter, telegrams were sent to President Gerald R. Ford, Governor Jimmy Carter, (now president-elect), various U.S. congressment and senators and commissioners of agriculture in the Northeastern states.

President Arden Tewksbury of Meshoppen, Pa. met with Assistant U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Richard L. Feltner on October 28 to brief him on Eastern's position and ask for his indulgence in this matter of increasing concern to Northeast dairy farmers. An effort was also made to enlist support of all other cooperatives in the Northeast regarding Eastern's emergency action and subsequent petition.

After suffering an unprecedented cost-price squeeze during 1974-1976, dairy farmers received some relief this Spring and Summer as milk prices improved. However, current indications are that milk prices during the ensuing Winter months will fall drastically from current levels and remain depressed through the first six months of 1977, unless some corrective action is taken under Federal and State milk marketing orders.

The action requested by Eastern would stabilize prices paid by milk dealers for milk used for fluid (bottling) purposes at not less than the levels which prevailed during October of this year. This temporary measure is intended to stay in effect through March 31, 1977.

From Pa.'s Dairy Princesses

By DEBRA KREIDER
Lancaster County
Dairy Princess

Debra Kreider

Representing Lancaster County's dairy industry since June 1976 has been a real challenge to me. I have not only met many people, but I, myself, have learned a lot about the dairy industry as I helped at dairy shows, participated in the state dairy princess pageant, attended mall and grocery store promotions, and other dairy related activities, all of which were very rewarding experiences. In doing these many things, I have learned how important it is for me to SHOW the public the strong convictions that I have about the product that I am representing and presenting to them.

When I speak at a dairy banquet, I've found that I can talk as long as I want, but if I don't show enthusiasm, the audience is not really convinced that the product I am talking about is the BEST. I believe that milk promotion starts where milk itself does - on the farm with the farmer and his cows. If dairy farmers do not support and promote their own product, than who will! If I enjoy a can of the leading pop after I have completed a speech on the importance of milk in an individual's diet, my audience is not going to be convinced at all. We, as dairy farmers, cannot only talk about the importance of milk, but we must live it in our everyday lives. We should keep in mind the old saying, "Actions speak louder than words."

I plan to live by this slogan in the months ahead as I continue my reign. I have already attended the promotional week at Park City where I handed out milk samples and made butter, among other dairy activities. And, now I am also setting up dates with elementary schools so that I can tell the children about the good, white liquid that comes from a cow. Senior Citizens groups are also on my agenda along with different dairy related banquets.

I am looking forward to the remainder of my reign as I promote nature's most nearly perfect health food - MILK. And, remember, "Seven days without milk makes one weak."

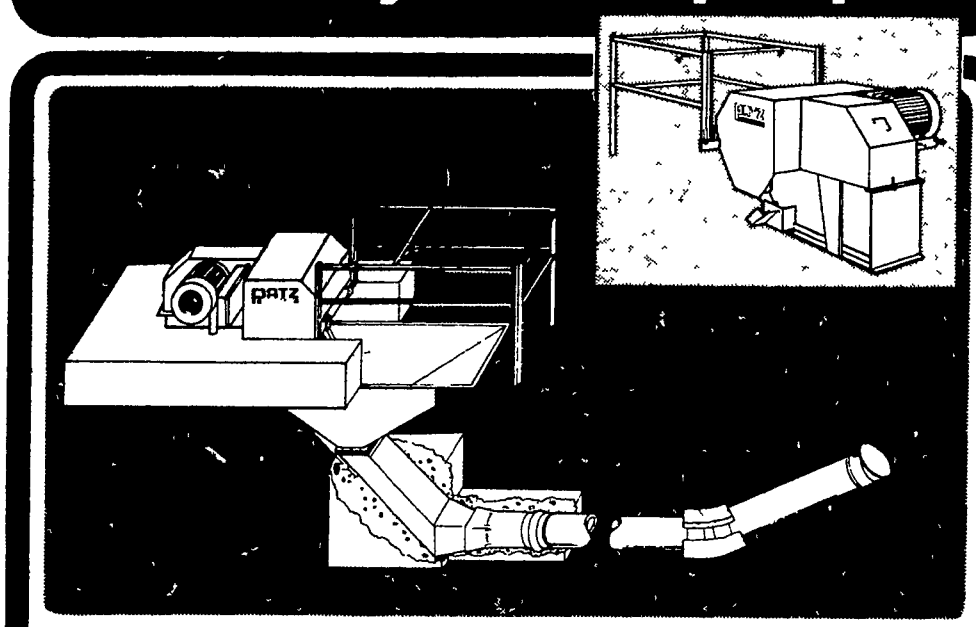
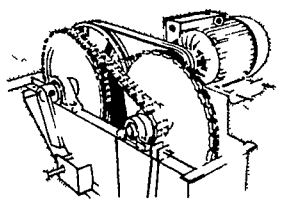
PATZ
slurry manure pump

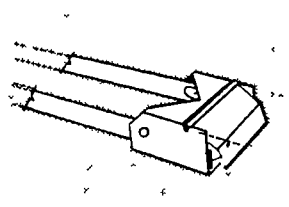


The Patz Slurry Manure Pump provides the ultimate solution to the moving of slurry liquid manure from dairy, beef, hogs or poultry installations to manure storage facilities.

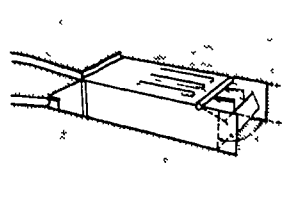
The new Patz Slurry Pump can move slurry and liquids up to 150 feet. The manure is supplied to an underground hopper with a gutter cleaner or scraper and is forced into a 12 inch P.V.C. pipe by means of an 8 inch by 15 inch plunger.



The Patz exclusive roller chain drive unit drives the plunger at a rate of 21 strokes per minute.



The 8 inch by 15 inch plunger forces the manure through a PVC pipe to storage facility.



Plunger sleeve can be removed from sleeve chamber for servicing without breaking out concrete.

A pictorial essay on land-use , productivity, and the dilemma of some farmla

Land use is a subject near the top of everyone's mind these days, with much concern being expressed over the preservation of agricultural land. This photo essay is designed to show what can and does happen to farmlands and accompanying buildings when acreage goes out of production.

In the upper left-hand corner of this double page is a picture of the farm as it was during the late Summer of 1962. Pride of ownership and diligent work turr property into one of relative beauty. The farm rec name (next picture), and the buildings whitewashed and painted. Various construction p were undertaken. By 1965 the same farm looke shown directly above.

vity, and the dilemma of some farmland being priced out of reach of young farmers

As many as 220 head of cattle roamed these acres during the late 1960's. Today there are none. Stanchions and box stalls are empty. The calf raising area, (center, below) is almost entirely window-less due to vandalism and weeds are choking the ground.

The picture in the upper right-hand corner was taken in the Spring of 1971, shortly before the farm was sold.

The pictures below were taken five years later, and need no further comment.

Land resource map aid to planning

UNIVERSITY PARK - Locations and descriptions of 153 Pennsylvania soil groups are available at an educational, non-profit cost of $3 in the Land Resources Map of the Commonwealth, published by the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State University.

Presenting land resources in graphic form, the map is unlike anything published previously for Pennsylvania. It brings together factors of soil depth, drainage, available moisture, and productive capacities of soils.

The map has already been used widely by industrial and community planners, Penn State officials report. High school and college teachers find it helpful in studying earth sciences. It was developed by Howard W. Higbee, professor emeritus of soil science, who considers it vital for soil and water resource managers.

Multiple patterns and colors are used to portray the 153 soil goups - coded and symbolized for identification. Each soil unit or group is evaluated by 16 characteristics. The more important characteristics are depth, soil drainage environment, geological source of soil material, available moisture, plant rooting zones, and dominant crop production.

Copies are available for the $3 plus 18 cents state sales tax, from Land Resources Map, Box 6000, University Park, Pa. 16802. Make check or money order payable to The Pennsylvania State University. Allow at least two weeks for delivery. The map may also be purchased directly in room 232 of the Agricultural Administration Building at University Park. The Office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, except holidays.

HARRISBURG - Poultry production in the Commonwealth continued above 1975 levels during the week ending October 23, according to the Crop Reporting Service.

Placements of broiler chicks were 1,516,000. The placements were 20 per cent above the corresponding week a year ago, but one per cent below the previous week.

Average placements during the past ten weeks were 20 per cent above a year earlier.

In the 21 key poultry producing states, placements were 59,764,000, eight per cent more than the same week in 1975, but three per cent below the previous week.

Average placements in the 21 states during the past ten weeks were nine per cent above a year ago.

Since standing corn dries at a rate of approximately one-half a percentage point a day, a narrow time range exists for minimum field loss. It is important to be prepared in advance, so that harvesting, drying and storing operations can proceed without costly delays.

Serv-O-Matic
Dairy Feeder
TWO MODELS AVAILABLE
The Model 101 Serv-O-Matic may be mounted through the wall in a loose housing system or through the fenceline for open lots Side braces are also provided for mounting and installation
The feeder opening is designed to permit only one cow to eat at a time A 2 inch auger drops approximately 1 lb of concentrate per minute into the feeder . this is the same rate the cow eats . no feed remains in the feeder when she moves away.
A simple magnet around the cow's neck will activate the feeder motor as she places her head into the feeder Cows without a magnet are unable to get feed
"Selectively" Provides More Feed to Top Producers
The Serv-O-Matic Dairy Feeder enables you to feed additional grain and concentrates only to the top producing cows in your herd! It eliminates the labor problem of separating the herd in a loose housing system to give individual attention to top producing animals.
The Serv-O-Matic is activated by a simple magnet fastened around the cow's neck. This way, only the cows you select can activate the feeder and receive additional ration . . . yet all animals can still be housed together.
Each cow producing 10 lb. or more over the herd average should receive extra feed. In actual trials, cows on the Serv-O-Matic consume an extra 10 lbs. of grain per day (while eating some less in the parlor). Milk output shows an average increase of 1 lb. of milk for each pound of concentrate fed through the Serv-O-Matic . . . some as high as 5 lbs. of milk per pound of feed!
One Serv-O-Matic will normally handle 20-30 cows in an 80-120 cow herd. Normal procedure is to put fresh cows on extra ration and remove the magnet when production drops to a predetermined level.

York and Adams FFA hold leadership training conference

YORK, Pa. - The York and Adams chapters of the Future Farmers of America held their annual Leadership Training Conference last month at the York Area Vo-Tech School. Taking part in this year's program were 132 FFA members and guests from the two counties.

Lori Wolfard, representing the Red Lion chapter, was the winner in an FFA quiz competition held during the seminar. Quiz material covered the structure, history, and general knowledge of the Future Farmer program. Presenting the questions was David Miller, State vice-president of the South Central Region.

Ila McGregor, a 16-year old junior from Dover High School, was selected Miss FFA Sweetheart. The entrants from each chapter were judged on applications, interviews, and talent. Miss McGregor, during her talent presentation, played a piano solo. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McGregor, East Berlin R1.

First runner-up was Tamara Fickes, representing Northern High School. Other Sweetheart competitors were Debra Ann Hess, Kennard-Dale; Angelia Young, Red Lion; and Christina Smith, Biglerville. Judges for the contest were Betty Warner, Mrs. Marian Benchof and Tim Stein.

Meetings for chapter officers and numerous group discussion subjects were held for the participants during the conference. An evening banquet featured the slide program by Eshelman Studios, Lancaster.

International® 715 Combine

Balanced capacity means you'll speed your harvest while saving more corn and soybeans Low-angle corn heads handle down or tall corn with equal ease. Aggressive stalk rolls and corn-saver auger control keep ears low in auger to reduce shelling and ear losses Hinged gatherer shields swing out of the way for easy access to chains
- 2, 3, 4-row corn heads for wide or narrow rows
- Stripper plates efficiently snap ears, minimize bounce, let less trash enter combine.
- Gas or diesel engines, up to 107 hp
- Big grain tanks—up to 96 bushels
- Grain heads from 10 to 20 ft, optional flexible floating cutterbar saves extra bushels of beans

The great new team in baby pig nutrition

In September, 1975 the team at Master Mix Research introduced a BREAKTHROUGH IN BABY PIG NUTRITION. No longer content with traditional baby pig rations that do little more than imitate sows milk, Master Mix Researchers went a couple of steps further. RESULT: SOW'S MILK and PRECISION BABY PIG FEEDS now COMPLEMENT each other, working TOGETHER to produce faster gaining, better looking and healthier baby pigs. And everybody knows that is the type of pig that will keep on doing well all the way to market.

Champions are a natural for Sarah Brubaker

By DIETER KRIEG

TIMONIUM, Md. - Sarah Brubaker, 14-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Brubaker, Lancaster, showed the grand champion market lamb here at the Eastern National Livestock Show a week ago. Afterwards she sold the 115 pound Hampshire for $4 per pound.

The ENLS draws exhibitors from all over the eastern part of the United States and a few from west of the Mississippi River.

Miss Brubaker has had considerable success with her sheep, winning top prizes at such prestigious shows as the Pennsylvania Farm Show, the Keystone Exposition, the Eastern States Exposition, and the ENLS. Included among her trophies are a number of awards for first-place entries. Working with sheep and having a high degree of success with them almost appears to be a natural for the young Lancaster Countian.

But nothing comes from nothing.

Miss Brubaker has worked diligently for the honors she's received.

She rates exercise, fitting, and showmanship as the three most important criteria to preparing an animal for a show. She shares her program and thoughts on each topic:

"I exercise my sheep six or seven days per week for as long as three or four months before the date of the show," Miss Brubaker explained. "I run'em over two-foot high hurdles and an oil drum for an average of 15 to 20 minutes per day. After a while they know what to do and they go pretty much by themselves."

The object is to develop an animal which shows thickness down its back, muscling, length of rump, length of loin, good muscling through the legs, and the proper amount of finish or fat.

Fitting a sheep properly is also important. Miss Brubaker makes it a point to work with her sheep for a few minutes every evening. That includes holding them, teaching them how to stand properly and training them. About a week or two before the show they're washed and trimmed all over. An immaculate coat of wool is the result. Brushing aside any idea that this may entail a good bit of work and patience just to prepare for a show which is months away, Miss Brubaker compliments her sheep by saying "They learn pretty fast, actually two or three nights of training would be enough."

Finally, there's the question of showmanship. With five years of experience as a member of the Lancaster County 4-H Beef and Sheep Club, Miss Brubaker knows how to set her sheep up properly. Her performances in the show ring prove it.

A freshman at Hempfield High School, the pretty young lady has been to the Eastern National a couple of times. She's had the grand champion market lamb at the Farm Show for three consecutive years. "I like the sheep and I enjoy doing it," she exclaimed with a pleasant smile.

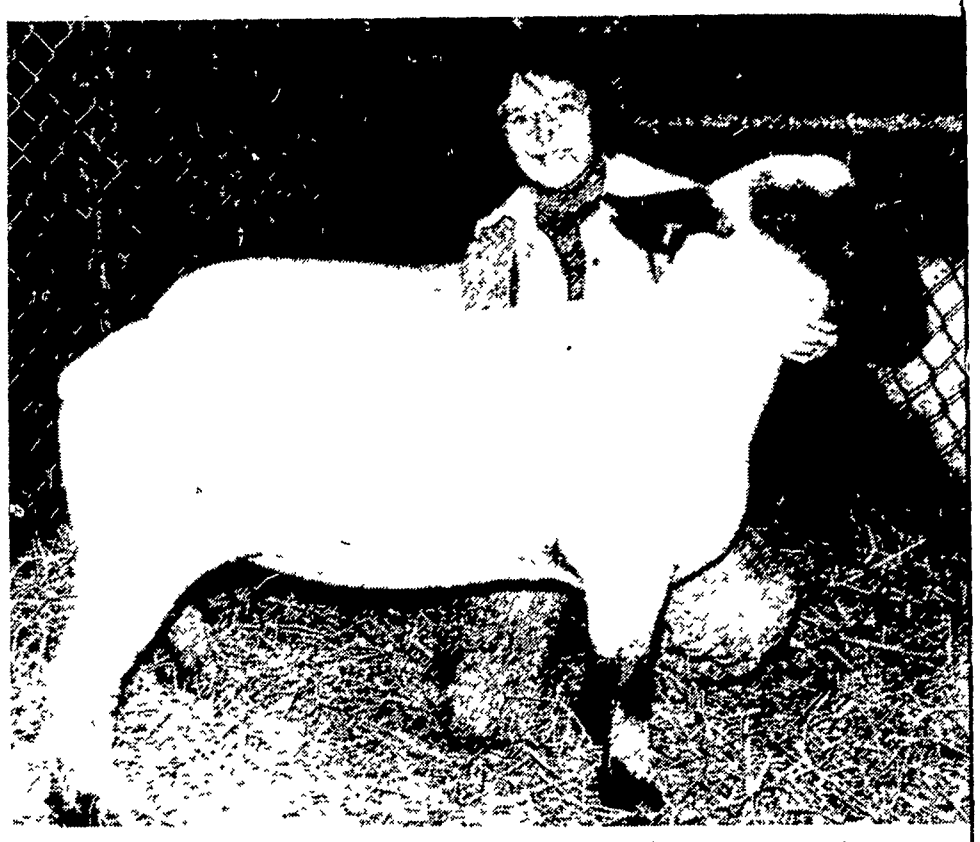
The Brubakers live on a 60-acre farm on the Harrisburg Pike, just two miles from the Park City shopping mall. Sheep have been a part of the farm for as long as Miss Brubaker can remember, and for that reason she finds it easy to work with them. According to her parents, Sarah has a way with animals.

Mrs. Brubaker, the former Dorothy Stehman of Lancaster, was an accomplished 4-H'er herself, showing several champion pens of lambs when she was in the program. Her father shows annually at the Farm Show and other major exhibitions.

Having a champion animal is not always pleasant. "When I had my first pen of champion lambs I didn't want to see them go," Miss Brubaker remembered. "But they have to be sold," she explained. "So there's no use crying, because they're going to go anyway."

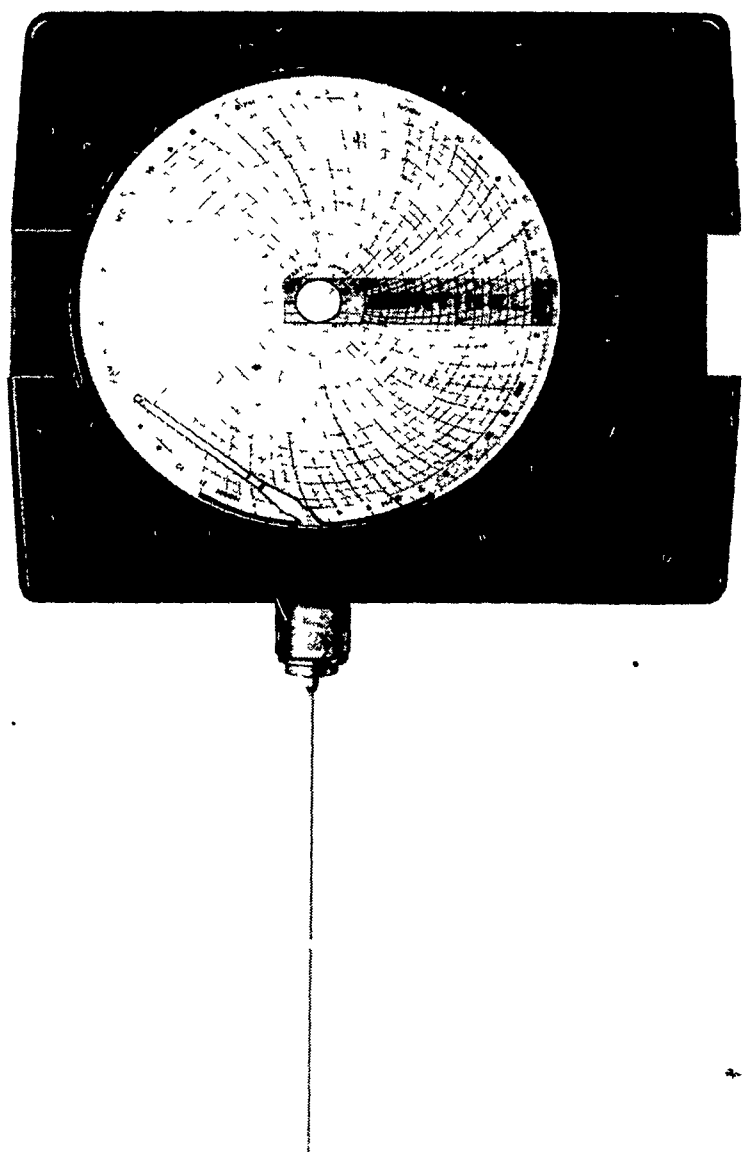
As would be expected, the success in the show ring has created a demand for sheep from the Brubaker farm. Some are sold to 4-H'ers in the area. While at the farm, the Brubakers' sheep are fed hay, (mostly alfalfa) some grain, and minerals. In addition, they have access to an exercise lot and grass.

"I like working with animals," Miss Brubaker replied to a question regarding her future plans. "I was brought up on a farm and I enjoy my 4-H Club work. I'd like a career which is related to animals - it wouldn't have to be sheep, but I'd try to make it be," she concluded with a broad grin and sparkling eyes.



Sarah Brubaker has been showing champion sheep for five years.

THE SENTINEL



Round-the-clock guardian of stored milk temperature

If you depend upon your milk check for a living, protect that income by insuring milk quality.

The least expensive, single-payment insurance obtainable is the Sentinel — the heavy-duty, 10-inch recorder which charts round-the-clock temperature of your milk-cooling or holding tank.

Assure yourself — and your processor — that proper milk temperature is always maintained.

Keep a permanent log of compressor operation and tank cooling or pre-cooling efficiency, from first filling to pickup.

Cleaning temperatures — increasingly questioned by sanitarians — are recorded on the same chart.

At little added cost, the Sentinel is available with provision for actuating an alarm or warning light if milk holding temperature rises above pre-set level.

Remember — if it prevents the loss of only one tank of milk, the Sentinel has paid its own way.

National Grange to meet in N.J. next week

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Resolutions to be considered by delegates at the 110th Annual Session of National Grange next week in Atlantic City, N.J. will be divided by subject and distributed to 13 session committees.

The committees, whose members are also voting delegates, will meet prior to the opening of the session for the purpose of preparing a preliminary report to present to the entire delegate body. Each report will be distributed to the delegates and verbally presented by the committee chairman. Each section of the report will require specific delegate action. Upon completion of the report, those sections adopted by the delegates will become Grange policy.

Approximately 500 resolutions from 37 state Granges will be considered. Committee chairmen will be: agriculture, Ralph J. O'Day (Del.); audit and credentials, Mrs. Darlene Andersen (Neb.); budget, George Grobusky (S.C.); conservation and natural resources, Wendell Chamberlain (N.Y.); education and health, Mrs. Patty Carncross (Mich.); foreign affairs, David Wedding (Mo.); grange law and good of the order, Daryl Lowry (Vt.); junior grange, Mrs. Fae Snyder (Pa.); national welfare, Mrs. Jocelyn Rhein (Wis.); taxation and fiscal policy, Kenneth Thomas (R.I.); transportation, William Burall (Md.); women's activities, Mrs. Lida Harris (Ore.) and youth, Mrs. Betty Deaver (Cal.).

The National Grange will also confer it highest ritualistic recognition to thousands of Grange members on Nov. 13 at Convention Hall.

The Grange, which is the oldest and second largest farm organization in the country, is also a fraternal order. Members having obtained their sixth degree and in good standing with their local Grange are eligible for the Seventh Degree. The degree conferral will be performed under the direction of C. Jerome Davis of Ramsey, Ind. Davis holds the fraternity's highest ritualistic office.

The Seventh Degree is given only once a year at the annual session of the National Grange.

Corn and soybean decisions outlined in Extension pamphlet

NEWARK, Del. - In response to numerous grower requests for information on the economics of corn and soybean production, University of Delaware Extension crops marketing specialist, Carl German, has prepared a publication entitled, "Representative Costs and Returns for Corn and Soybean Production at Various Yield Levels and Size of Operation."

The publication is intended to alleviate some of the uncertainties the farmer has to deal with today, by letting him evaluate his own costs and returns more accurately. By understanding the variables and how they affect his operation, says German, the grower can make production and marketing decisions that are more in line with his particular circumstances and thus optimize his income.

Seventy-five per cent of Delaware's crop production is in corn and soybeans.

Cash production costs covered in the budgets German has developed include costs for seed, herbicides, fuel and fertilizer. Fixed costs included are those associated with machinery, depreciation, interest on investment in machinery, insurance and repairs, land interest and taxes.

Because not all growers fit the same category as far as land and equipment ownership, indebtedness and labor source, the marketing specialist has provided some variables, or "assumptions," that take different equity positions into account.

Farmers wishing to obtain a copy of this helpful Extension bulletin may obtain copies by writing MAILROOM, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark 19711.

4-H Beef and Lamb Club holds roundup and sale

By JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Reporter

THOMASVILLE, Pa. - York-Adams County 4-H Beef and Lamb members held their annual roundup and sale October 26 and 27 at the Thomasville Livestock Market.

Laurie Dobrosky, Glen Rock, R2, showed the grand champion lamb. The animal was a 135-pound Shropshire-Suffolk crossbreed. The animal sold for $1.21 a pound and was purchased by J. L. Miller Meats, York, R8. Miss Dobrosky also exhibited the animal which won the reserve grand champion lamb title. The purebred Dorset weighed in at 95 pounds. Ray Mummert, Brodbecks, R1, finished the bidding fot the reserve animal at $1.07 a pound.

A total of 47 lambs were exhibited by the 27 participating 4-H'ers. The sale animals, not including the grand and reserve winners, brought a total of $2,594.65 for their York and Adams County sellers. Placing the sheep during the show was Dr. Erskin Cash, Penn State University.

"H.P.C.," a 1,180 pound purebred Angus, owned by Christine Shive, Seven Valleys, R1, won the Grand Champion Steer banner. He sold to Jay's Supermarkets of York for 80 cents a pound. Tim Caldwell, Windsor, R1 exhibited the Reserve Champion steer. Another of the Angus breed, the reserve animal weighed 1,140 pounds and went to Thomas's Meats, Shrewsbury, for 67 cents a pound. The two steers also were named grand and reserve champions of the Angus breed show.

In the Hereford division, Stephanie Lehr, Spring Grove, R2, exhibited the winning steer. Reserve Hereford placing went to Katy Kohr, Wrightsville, R1.

In addition to the steer competition, the 4-H members participated in fitting and showing classes with their animals. Champion fitter was Tim Caldwell who also won the Junior competition; and reserve fitter was Christine Shive. Medium age winning fitte went to Ed Klinedinst, ag 13, and first place senic fitter went to Jeff Golden c Gettysburg.

Champion showman wa Ed Klinedinst. Tim Caldwe took another award in th category, being name reserve showman, as well a winner of the Junior divisio Senior class winner wa

Cattle feeding business to be studied

HINKLETOWN, Pa. - The Hinkletown Adult Farmer program will look into the cattle feeding business on Wednesday evening, November 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hinkletown Alternative School. A panel comprised of William McCoy, Lancaster Stockyards, Abe Diffenbach, New Holland Sales Stable, and Amos Weaver, a local cattle feeder, will discuss the maximizing of profits in feeding cattle.

Cattle feeders often consider the alternatives of feeding bulls and steers, but rarely consider heifers. A look at the total possibilities is necessary to maximize profits from a cattle feeding operation.

The Alternative school is located east of Hinkletown and north of Route 322 on Wanner Road. The meeting will be open to all interested persons.

Thoughts in Passing

By ROBERT S. WOODS
Garden Spot High School
New Holland, Pa.

This year, as the month of November rolls around, many FFA chapters across the state of Pennsylvania and the nation begin final preparation before attending the national Future Farmer of America Convention which is held annually in Kansas City, Missouri.

The National FFA Association, which consists of approximately 500,000 members, holds the National Convention to honor members across America as well as conduct important legislation affecting the organization.

During this week of important meetings and activity, many contests of national scope are held to select the most outstanding FFA students and judges in the FFA.

One of these contests, the National Poultry Contest, is also held during this week. The National Poultry Contest has approximately 50 state teams competing for the national title. The Pennsylvania state poultry team has three members, two of which are from Garden Spot High School, New Holland, Pa. The three students representing Pennsylvania are Dennis Moose from Mercer High School, Mercer, Pa.; Harry Boley, Garden Spot High School, New Holland, Pa.; and Kenneth Fox, Garden Spot High School, New Holland, Pa. These three students placed top in the State Poultry Contest which was held this past summer at the Penn State University.

This year the National Poultry contest will include the following areas to be judged: egg grading, interior and exterior quality and egg breakouts; dressed ready to cook broilers; dressed turkeys; identification of poultry diseases and parasites; and evaluation of live laying hens and pullets. After judging the laying hens, oral reasons must be presented to a contest judge which will justify the student's placings.

In the egg grading portion of the contest, students must be able to candle eggs to determine any one of five different qualities ranging from AA quality to inedible. Exterior shell quality must be determined by looking for shell irregularities, dirt, or cracks. The final portion of egg grading consists of breaking the eggs out to determine quality which is indicated by the thickness of the white and the appearance of the yolk.

The dressed bird areas are more complicated. This year judges must evaluate dressed broilers and turkeys to determine various quality grades. These grades run from A grade to no-grade or reject. Requirements such as fleshing, discoloration, torn skin, broken bones, and feathering are used to place quality grades in this class.

The disease and parasite identification area of the contest requires that the students be able to identify approximately 50 to 60 different diseases which affect the poultry industry. The last area of judging involves the selection and culling of five laying hens and pullets. After placing these birds, oral reasons are given to justify the placings of the birds. Birds are placed on size, quality, pigmentation of comb and wattles, and degree of bleaching in the legs and beak.

This year the National Poultry contest was made possible by the support of one of Lancaster County's fine industries. Victor F. Weaver, Poultry, Inc. of New Holland is co-sponsoring the contest. Weaver's is making possible the travel, contest expense, awards, and awards breakfast for the members competing in the National Poultry Judging contest.

'CB' replacing dinner bell

TROY, Mich. - The farm family cowbell that calls all hands to dinner may soon be a thing of the past if two-way citizens band radio sales to farm equipment owners continue to grow.

Lloyd D. Robertson, parts sales manager for Ford Motor Company's North American Tractor and Implement Operations, said that the best available industry figures indicate that one in six U.S. farm families now owns one or more CB radio units.

Robertson predicted that with the introduction of the new 40-channel units beginning January, 1977, sales rates should exceed current levels. The new units will help prevent future overcrowding, but both the new units and the current 23-channel models will let listeners monitor the trucker's channel 19 and the emergency channel 9.

"Farmers, particularly those with larger acreage now are discovering the efficiencies in having base-station sets in their homes and receiver-sender units in tractors, combines, other field machinery and trucks," Robertson said.

"These CBs do a lot more than announce that dinner is on the table. They can be used to order additional fuel, seed and fertilizer for machines in the field, call for trucks to remove crop loads, or let a farm wife know that the crews will be in in 30 minutes - even if dinner is not on the table. Actually, the list of added efficiencies a farm CB radio system creates is practically endless," Robertson said.

Girl has top steer

TRENTON, N.J. - A Monmoth County, N.J. girl recently showed the top steer at the New Jersey Baby Beef Show, held here at the State Fairgrounds last month.

Christine Ondrosh exhibited her Hereford steer to grand championship honors and later sold the animal for $1.60 per pound. The reserve banner went to Clay Clement of Glouster County. His entry was a Simmental which commanded a price of $1.10 per pound.

A total of 120 head were shown in the show, with 29 of the animals coming from Hunterdon County. That worked out to 14.8 tons of beef from one county, according to a spokesman reporting on the event.

The over-all average of the sale calculated out to 62 cent per pound.

Berks Co. 4-H beef roundup held

LEESPORT, Pa. - Lori Hass, Douglassville R2, had the grand champion steer at the Berks County 4-H Baby Beef Roundup and Sale at the Leesport Market and Auction last month. Her steer was also the first place steer in the heavy - heavy class and weighed a total of 1180 pounds. Lori received .54 a pound for the animal which added up to a total of $637.20. The animal was purchased by R. Zettlemoyer Action Co.

The second ranking animal at the roundup and sale was owned by Darlene Dietrich, Hamburg R1, and was a 1105 pound animal that also took first place in the light - heavyweight class. E. K. Black and Son, Skippack, purchased the animal for .52 a pound or a total of $574.60.

Ronald Heffner, Fleetwood R2, had the first place light-lightweight animal which sold for .44 a pound. The second placed light-lightweight steer belonged to James Heffner, Fleetwood R2, and sold for .42-½ a pound.

Kennianne Rarick, Reading R2, had the second ranking heavy-lightweight steer which sold for .45 a pound, and Elaine Heffner, Fleetwood R2, and the second placing light-mediumweight which sold for .43 a pound. The second placing heavy-medium weight belonged to Scott Rabenold, Kutztown R2, and sold for .43 a pound. Other prices for the second ranking animal in each class were .45-½ per pound for the second ranking light-heavyweight, and .43 for the heavy-heavyweight second place steer.

Also chosen at the roundup were those steers which will be going onto the Farm Show in Harrisburg this coming January. Those picked to attend were: Ann Holcombe, Sandy Kohl, Michel Strause, Dennis Dietrich, Christina Hoffman, Steve Bashore, and Nedra Yoder.

Showing and fitting honors were also bestowed on the 4-H'ers at the roundup. First place senior showman was Dean Kirkhoff, and first place junior showman went to Darlene Dietrich. First place senior fitter went to Dennis Dietrich and first place junior fitter went to Liane Hass.

Other buyers for the sale were Schobber, Denver R1; Leesport Market and Auction, Leesport; Reading Kiwanis Club, Reading; Fleetwood Grange, Fleetwood; Mar-Ray Farm, Bechtelsville R1; Gilbert's Meats, Lehighton R1; Meller Cattle, N.J.; A. F. Moyer Meat, Souderton; T. M. Landis, Inc., Mainland; Reichstadter Meats, Lehighton R3; L. Richards, Boyertown; Raymond Long, Bechtelsville; Perkiomenville Sales; Balthaser Meat Market, Temple; Kipp Meat Co., Bethlehem; Harold Loffiette; and Kipp Meat Co., Bethlehem.

Hunting land expanded

HARRISBURG, Pa. - The Pennsylvania Game Commission has approved the purchase of an additional 4,423 acres of land to be used for public hunting.

Tracts totaling 4,423 acres were approved in Bedford, Bradford, Dauphin, Erie, Greene, Juniata and Lawrence Counties. Expenditure of $664,500 for the acquisitions of land was authorized. Most of the monies will come from the Game Fund, which has as its primary source of income the sale of hunting licenses.

Beef comments due Nov. 15

NEW YORK, N.Y. - At the close of a public hearing on a proposed national beef research and information order, U.S. Department of Agriculture Administrative Law Judge Victor W. Palmer announced a Nov. 15 deadline for filing briefs on evidence received during the hearing.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture published an industry-proposed order outlining procedures to guide program operation under authority of the Beef Research and Information Act. The proposal would authorize a Beef Board, composed of producers, to collect assessments on the sales of cattle and to use the funds for cattle and beef research and information activities.

During hearing sessions in six cities across the country, more than 150 cattle industry representatives and other interested persons testified on the need for a national beef research and information program and on provisions the order should contain.

Any interested person may now file written arguments or briefs based on evidence received at the hearing, and should cite, when possible, the page or pages where the evidence appears in the hearing transcript. After certification for accuracy and completeness, the transcript and exhibits from the hearing will be available for examination in the USDA Hearing Clerk's office during normal business hours. Briefs must be limited to factual material received at the hearing and five copies should be submitted by Nov. 15 to: Hearing Clerk, Room 112-A, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

USDA will formulate a recommended decision on the order based on evidence from the hearing and public comment will be invited on the decision. After full evaluation of the comments and other relevant material in the record, the secretary of agriculture may then issue a final decision. The next step would be registration and voting by producers in a nationwide referendum. The order would become effective only if at least 50 per cent of the producers who register vote, and if two-thirds of them vote in favor of the order.

NEW MODEL 70 S
Zero Concord
TWIN VACUUM PIPELINE
MILKING SYSTEM
WITH COW MONITOR
It's a combination of a new, revolutionary pipeline milking machine and the ZERO Completely-Automated Vacuum Bulk Milk Cooler

The ZERO CONCORD is the only system that provides stable milking vacuum at the teat end — in parlor or stanchion barn — with a low or high, short or long, pipeline — and without injecting air into the milker units to move the milk Only with stable vacuum and no air injection can you hope to reduce leucocyte counts up to 65% — increase milk production as much as 20% — and prevent off-flavor and rancid milk

The safe, stable vacuum is made possible by a patented, scientific principle TWIN VACUUM whereby one vacuum milks the cows, and a different vacuum moves the milk through a separate pipeline into the bulk tank In addition — thanks to ZERO's patented SPATTER-SPRAY Automatic Washer and new, improved, high capacity transparent milker unit — you have built in, "push-button', visible self cleaning and sanitizing of the entire system — without disassembling And there are many other advantages

Commercial pesticide certification exam set

LANCASTER, Pa. - Commercial pesticide applicators will have an opportunity to take another certification exam this November at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster, it has been announced by Arnold G. Lueck, county agricultural agent. The date is November 18, starting at 9:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. A representative of the Pa. Department of Agriculture will be on hand to supervise this written test.

There are a number of categories in which commercial applicators can be certified for the application of restricted use materials in the future. Included are agronomic crops, vegetables, ornamentals and, shade trees, lawn and turf, household, fumigation, industrial and several other. Applicators must complete a basic exam plus one or more of the categories selected by the individual.

Pennsylvania law states that certification must be completed by October 1977. No fees are involved in taking the exam to qualify as a certified applicator.

Further information concerning these exams is available at the Cooperative Extension Service, 394-6851.

Library opens

QUARRYVILLE, Pa. - The formal dedication of the Southern Lancaster County Library Center will take place November 7, at 2:00 pm. The center is located at 304 St. Catherine Street, here, directly to the rear of the Borough Building. It is the newest Library Center to be added to the Lancaster County Library System.

ACA launches fact finding mission

WASHINGTON, D.C., - A nationwide fact-finding mission to "nail down specific solutions" to problems that affect the U.S. farmer and consumer will begin Nov. 15.

The effort, under the sponsorship of the Agriculture Council of America, will involve farmers and consumers in 15 major U.S. cities during a four week period.

"We plan to nail down specific solutions - workable ideas and plans that can be actively supported by both groups," according to ACA Chairman E.L. (Shug) Hatcher, a Lamar, Colorado wheat and beef producer.

Hatcher said five teams of farmers and farm wives representing "a broad cross-section of American agriculture" will each visit three cities to meet personally with municipal leaders, consumer and labor groups, people in the academic community and shoppers at grocery stores.

"We hope to involve as many people as possible in the search for specific ways farmers and consumers can work together," Hatcher said. "We expect that much of the focus will be on how to produce food at affordable prices, yet insure a fair income to growers."

The schedule for the farmer teams is as follows: Pittsburgh - Nov. 15-16, Albany - Nov. 17-18, Boston - Nov. 19-20; Kansas City - Nov. 15-16, Dallas - Nov. 17-18, Denver - Nov. 19-20; Phoenix - Nov. 29-30, Sacramento - Dec. 1-2, Portland - Dec. 3-4; St. Louis - Nov. 29-30, Chicago - Dec. 1-2, Minneapolis - Dec. 3-4; Atlanta - Dec. 6-7, Memphis - Dec. 8-9, Jacksonville - Dec. 10-11.

The tour represents ACA's most comprehensive effort to meet with consumers at all levels. All ACA programs emphasize direct "person-to-person" communication between farmers and city people. Among its programs are the "Farm Line," a toll-free telephone bank, that lets people anywhere in the country speak directly with top decision-makers on major agricultural issues. The "City-Farm Swap" allows rural and urban families to learn about each other on weekend exchange visits.

The Agriculture Council of America, founded in 1973, is made up of individual farmers, farm and commodity organizations and companies that supply farmers. Its purpose is to improve communication between farmers and urban consumers.

SPF refers to very special hogs

EAST BERLIN, Pa. - During the early 1950's swine producers, university professors, and veterinarians joined together to study the problems regarding various diseases and their effect on efficient swine production. As a result of their efforts, the Specific Pathogen Free (SPF) swine organization was founded in the mid 1950's.

The SPF organization functions in eighteen states, largely throughout the Midwest, with central headquarters located in Conrad, Iowa. Breeders within the organization are dedicated to raising disease free hogs. All of the major breeds are included, as are all sizes of herds.

The original SPF pigs were taken by Caesèrian process in laboratories and never came in contact with infected animals. As herds develop, animals may only be entered into an SPF herd from another SPF herd. SPF animals may be introduced into any existing herd.

In order for a herd to be accredited certain provisions must be met. All animals must be maintained behind double fencing, if kept outside. No individual may enter lots or pens without following strict sanitary precautions. In addition, animals must be slaughtered quarterly and the snout and lungs analyzed for atrophic rhinitis and enzootic pneumonia by the state laboratory. A veterinarian must visit the premises quarterly and certify that no external parisites or vibrionic dysentery exist. He also must check the general health of the herd as well as various management practices. A proper vaccination program must be maintained for erysipelas and leptospirosis. Brucellosis validation must occur yearly. An annual visit by a representative of the national office is mandated.

A York County farmer, Joel R. Stern, is the only SPF breeder in northeastern United States. Two other states in the eastern U. S., Georgia and South Carolina, have one breeder each. Stern has maintained his 20 sow registered Yorkshire herd since June of 1974. Most of his stock are sold for breeding purposes throughout Pennsylvania and surrounding states. Records concerning feed conversion and daily gain are kept for many of the animals at the Red Run Farm located at East Berlin, Pa.

Stern is an active participant in the State and National Yorkshire organization. In January of 1976 he exhibited a boar and two gilts at the National Type Conference in Kingston, North Carolina. He showed the champion boar at the February state sale and the littermate champions at the March sale. At the August Pennsylvania show he displayed the champion boar.

Elizabeth Sperry chosen Pa. Poultry queen

By JOANNE SPAHR

HARRISBURG, Pa. - In what may have been the last commodity queen contest of the year, Elizabeth Sperry was chosen as Pennsylvnia's Poultry Queen on October 29 at the Sheraton-Harrisburg Inn, here, amid elegant surroundings, fine food, and a court of five other attractive young ladies who offered stiff competition.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sperry, Atlantic, Pa., Liz is no stranger to queen contests. In 1974 she was named Miss Pennsylvania Rural Electrification which made her eligible for national competition held in San Francisco, Ca. In that national contest, she was honored by being named one of two recipients of the Miss Congeniality award.

And, just as she is no stranger to beauty contests, Liz is also no stranger to the poultry industry. She was raised on a 342 acre poultry farm which as of last year, became a family corporation, and because of the addition of a third highrise layer building, will now have 94,000 layers by next Spring. The family has also recently started growing their own replacement pullets in a 40,000 bird start-grow house. Not surprisingly, the Sperrys were one of six master farmers chosen in 1975.

And, of course, Liza has an active role in the family business.

"I'll have you know," she pertly announces with a trickster's grin on her face, "that I have been a certified egg candler for five years now."

The newly crowned Pennsylvania Poultry Queen is Elizabeth Sperry, a senior at Penn State University who has set her sites on working in some facet of agribusiness.

Although she savs that statement with a big grin on her face and laughter in her voice, she is definitely proud of being part of the operation.

Now a Senior at Penn State with an interdisciplinary major in general arts and sciences which she fashioned herself, Liz has high hopes of going into an agri-business related occupation which, she explains, will combine her college education with the way of life she's always known.

"I'd really like to work with cooperatives," she said when asked to state her preference for job opportunities. She went on to explain that she has been actively working with cooperatives in Crawford County, her home county. For example, she has been a resource leader for a PAFC summer institute, and this past season she was a summer Extension assistant for the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service of Crawford County.

A peppy young lady who described one of her favorite hobbies as "enjoying life in general," Liz won the hearts of the audience and judges with her knowledgeable answers and good sense of humor.

During the contest, each girl was asked to answer one of three industry questions and a general knowledge question relating to poultry.

GRANGE NEWS

104th annual convention

Decisions, resolutions adopted by State Grange

SHARON, Pa. - In a series of major policy-making decisions, the Pennsylvania State Grange last month called for clear and understandable language in legislation; overseeing by the General Assembly of rules and regulations promulgated by state agencies; and a development rights plan for preserving agricultural land. These decisions came during the 104th annual meeting of State Grange, here.

In its proposal for preserving agricultural land, the Grange recommended zoning or rezoning of districts by local government; that development rights be assigned each farm in an area zoned agricultural equal to the number of lots that could be developed on that farm; that before any development can take place in a residential area, equal developmental rights must be purchased from a person in the agricultural area, and that the rights must be used within one year; that building rights must be purchased within the local municipality as long as they are available there. Only after the supply is exhausted could rights be purchased in an adjoining municipality; and that all land used for agriculture, whether in an area zoned agricultural or residential, be given preferential assessment as long as it remains in agriculture.

General Assembly to take action to clarify the language of all legislation. The organization specifically recommended amending a 1937 law to require that all legislation be "carefully edited to eliminate words and phrases that conflict with clarity and understanding."

Grange delegates also called on Congress to take similar steps to provide federal laws that are "clear, understandable and free of ambiguity."

In action recommending oversight of rules and regulations, the Grange suggested legislation that would permit five Senators or 20 members of the House of Representatives to delay adoption of rules or regulations until they could be reviewed by the Legislature.

The action would have to be taken within 60 days after the rules or regulations had been published in the Pennsylvania Bulletin. Failure of the General Assembly to act within 30 legislative days would automatically make the rules or regulations effective.

In other action taken at the business session, the Grange urged action to limit or control imitation cheese products which threaten the economy of the natural cheese industry, and threaten the stability of prices dairy farmers receive for milk; condemned scare type announcements such as those regarding the low-level increase in radioactive fallout that followed a recent atomic test in China; recommended that the Department of Environmental Resources or other governmental agency, before making such an announcement, clear it with the Department of Agriculture if the report may be damaging to agriculture or reflect undue danger in agricultural products.

At the same annual convention, the Grange also asked for strict enforcement of dairy import quotas to improve the economic stability of dairy farmers and processors. The Grange urged the action as a measure to encourage dairy farmers to remain in business.

The resolution pointed out that imports have increased sharply this year, despite a "plentiful supply of high quality dairy products in the United States." The Grange also noted that per capita consumption of milk and dairy products has decined, resulting in a tighter economic squeeze on dairy farmers.

Representative Kent D. Shelhamer, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, complimented Grange delegates on their interest and involvement in legislative action after listening to a discussion of resolutions.

He also commended the group, which he described as "the largest rural organization in Pennsylvania," for its efforts in supporting legislation beneficial to agricultural and rural areas.

He cited several measures enacted during the current session of the Legislature and called attention particularly to House Bill 217 that he termed "the Grange's own bill."

He explained that the Grange had initiated efforts to have the bill introduced, then actively supported it at each step through the Legislature. The bill, signed last May by Governor Shapp, defers payment of sewer and water line construction assessments for farmers as long as they keep their land in agriculture.

Shelhamer told the Gangers that agricultural interests had a good record of accomplishments in this session, "the best we have ever had in the General Assembly."

But, he cautioned the Grange to look ahead, and prepare for a much greater involvement in the legislative field. "You need more facilities, more manpower to do the job that will have to be done.

"Remain keenly aware of the issues and what they are, and let your legislators know where you stand," Shelhamer concluded.

Among other resolutions adopted before Shalhamer's address, was one calling on the State Agriculture Department to declare Johnsongrass a noxious weed so that measures can be adopted to control this plant pest that is becoming a problem in several parts of the state.

The Grange also called on Congress to "thoroughly review the present agricultural program with respect to target prices for farm commodities for our present needs; and provide necessary legislation to bring agricultural loan rates in line with present market prices."

Sperry

In addition, all six were interviewed by John Hoffman, executive director of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, the organization who sponsored the event.

Prior to the contest, each girl had also been personally interviewed by a panel of judges consisting of Delphine Lynch, former Federation pageant coordinator; and Betty Rode, consumer coordinator for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. There was also a male judge on the panel, who was a representative of the Commonwealth National Bank.

While the judges were deliberating, Dawn Heisler, 1975-76 Pennsylvania Poultry Queen, gave her farewell address, reminiscing over some of the good times she enjoyed in her past year's reign. And, as a gift of appreciation from the Federation, William Carlin, Federation immediate past president, awarded her with a self-portrait mounted on wood.

Other contestants in the pageant were Vicki Sherick, representing Lancaster County; Sandra Markey, from York County; Darlene Resh, candidate from Adams County; Pamela Benfer from Northumberland County; and Kendra Wagner, representing Dauphin County.

Agway, Inc. was the sponsor for Miss Sperry.

Sectional winners awarded trips to Chicago

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. - Several young adults in the coverage area of Lancaster Farming were recently named northeastern United States sectional winners in their areas of 4-H. Those youths are Janet Hutchison, 18, West Grove R2, who had been a state winner in the entomology category of the National 4-H Awards Program; Joan Strock, 15, of 735 Williams Grove Road, Mechanicsburg, who was a state winner in the bicycle category; and Karen Rittle, 18, Lebanon R1, who was a state winner in the home environment area.

All three will receive expense-paid trips to National 4-H Congress in Chicago on November 28 - December 2. The S & H Foundation will sponsor Miss Rittle; Goodyear Tire and Rubber will sponsor Miss Strock; and Hercules Incorporated will provide the backing for Miss Hutchison.

Janet Hutchison

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hutchison, Janet is a sophomore at Duke University. She has been a 4-H member for 10 years.

A member of the West Grove 4-H Entomology Club and Oxford 4-H Community Club, she served as president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, news reporter, game leader, and song leader. She also served as a leader of the entomology club.

The state entomology contest winner completed projects in 10 units of entomology, teen leadership, gardening, business, clothing, foods, bicycle, and flowers.

She was involved in the Chester County teen leaders workshop, picnic, poster contest, achievement night, fair, roundup, officers training, and entomology judging.

She also took part in the Regional Teen Agribusiness Conference, Regional 4-H Teen Leaders Retreat, District 4-H Camp, State 4-H Capital Days, State 4-H Leadership Camp, Pennsylvania 4-H Leadership Congress, State 4-H Achievement Days, Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives Summer Youth Institute, American Institute of Cooperation, and Citizenship Short Course.

Karen Rittle

In 1974 she was selected as the Outstanding 4-H Girl in Chester County, was winner of the Danforth "I Dare You" Award, and was a Keystone 4-H Award winner in entomology, citizenship, and outstanding girl.

Joan Strock

Joan, a sophomore at the Mechanicsburg Area Senior High School, has been a 4-H member for seven years. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Strock.

A member of the East End Explorers, Mechanicsburg 4-H Community Club, and County 4-H Recreation Club, she served as secretary and county council delegate. She also directed members in project work.

The state bicycle contest winner completed products in bicycle, swine, pet care, recreation, teen leadership, and sewing.

She also attended the Regional 4-H Teen Leaders Retreat, State 4-H Achievement Days, Pennsylvania 4-H Congress, and Farm Show.

She was a county medalist in recreation and bicycle categories.

Karen Rittle

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl E. Rittle, Karen is a freshman at Lebanon Valley College. She has been a 4-H member for nine years.

A member of the Avon-East Lebanon 4-H Club, she served as president, treasurer, and news reporter. She also was a teen leader.

The state home environment contest winner completed projects in self determination, design with line, colonial foods, clothing, home management, and teen leadership.

In Lebanon County, she participated in the 4-H dress revue, day camp, officers training, fair, and achievement night.

She also took part in the State 4-H Leadership Congress, State 4-H Achievement Days, Citizenship Short Course, and Regional 4-H Teen Leaders Retreat.

She won special 4-H honors in consumerama, outstanding girl, home management, home environment, leadership, clothing, and was a Keystone 4-H Award winner in home environment.

State Grange reelects officers

SHARON, Pa. - Delegates to the 104th annual convention of the Grange, here, reelected J. Luther Snyder, of Camp Hill, to a two-year term as state master. He was elected to that position two years ago at Washington, Pa.

George W. Rodgers, of Slippery Rock R3, the National Grange Prince, was elected assistant steward to succeed C. Arthur Zug, Port Royal R2, who had served six years and was not eligible for reelection to that post.

In addition to Snyder, other officers reelected by the State Grange are: Robert E. Steese, Grove City R1, overseer; Mrs. William Buffington, Chadds Ford R1, lecturer; Kenneth Schlegel, Fleetwood R3, steward; Mrs. Frances Sullivan, Charleroi R2, lady assistant steward; the Rev. Thomas B. Musser, West Milton, chaplain; John H. Minor, Camp Hill, treasurer. N. Gale Moore, Enola, secretary; Robert Hollabaugh, Warren, gatekeeper; Mrs. Andrew Springer, Towanda R5, ceres; Mrs. Wayne Raisley, Renfrew R1, pomona; Mrs. John Master, Harrisbille, flora; Clifford Holloway, Jr., Peach Bottom R1, executive committee member, and Claude Howell, Thompson R1, member of the finance committee.

R. Heffner gets nod

SYRACUSE, N.Y. - Ralph H. Heffner of Pine Grove, Pa., has been elected to a second 3-year term on the Agway board of directors. Heffner was elected at the cooperative's twelfth annual meeting here on Oct. 28-29.

Heffner maintains a 100-cow dairy herd, raises forage crops, grains, and fruit, and operates a roadside market. He is a former secretary of Agway's Blue Mountain Zone committee and a member of the Cressona Petroleum committee.

Heffner is also president of the Schuylkill County Fruit Growers Association, vice chairman of the Wayne Planning Commission, and a director of the Schuylkill County DHIA.

National Grange to publish song book for the deaf

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The National Grange has announced the publication of "Lift Up Your Hands," a song book for the deaf. The book is a collection of patriotic and inspirational songs illustrated in sign language with music for the guitar.

The women's activities department of the Grange adopted a national health project several years ago to aid the deaf and hard of hearing. Mrs. Jenny Grobusky, director of women's activities, said that in working with organizations and individuals serving the deaf she discovered a book of this nature was not available. She said, "During the past few years Grange youth have also become very much involved in teaching sign language and their interest in helping the deaf has taken on new dimensions."

Consequently the women's department and youth department joined forces to publish "Lift Up Your Hands." The book is being edited by Donna Gadling, Tom Skinner Associates, Office of Campus Ministries, Gallaudet College and Dr. Lottie Riekehof, coordinator of Interpreter Training, Gallaudet College, Washington, D.C. Gallaudet College is the only college for the deaf in the country.

William Steel, National Grange youth director, said the book will be unveiled during the annual session of the National Grange, Nov. 8-15 in Atlantic City, N.J. Copies will then be available for purchase at a cost of $2.00 from National Grange Headquarters, 1616 H St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20006.

Cookbook

Also, the National Grange Bicentennial Year Cookbook reached sales of 150,000 in less than one year after it was published, reports Mrs. Grobusky. The "best seller" was published last November and will only be available until the end 1976.

The book has been so nationally through loc Granges and Nation Grange headquarters Washington, D.C. It h. received praise from bo editors and women's edito of major publications a been reviewed by membe of the broadcast media. "W are so proud to have offere such a worthwhile souven of the Bicentenni celebration," said Mr Grobusky. A limited numbe of books is still available an may be purchased for $5.(from National Grang Headquarters.

Roger Perry heads York Co. Farmers' Assn.

RED LION, Pa. - Roger Perry, Edgewood Lane, York, was chosen to head the York County Farmers Association during a recent reorganization meeting of the Board of Directors held at Dairyland on October 19.

Charles Rauhauser was voted in as the organization's vice-president, after being reelected to the Board during the October 7 annual meeting. Perry and Rauhauser are both dairymen. Mrs. Ailean Detter was retained as secretary-treasurer.

Three first-time directors represent the wide range of commodities produced in the county. Eugene Ort, Etters R2, raises wheat, oats, corn and hay in the northern tier of the county. David Wolf is a partner in the family-owned Wolf Farms, Inc. at Stewartstown R2. He oversees the potato packing operation and poultry replacements in the corporation. A sixth generation fruit farmer, Dr. Glenn Shaw won his PhD at the University of Maryland; and then with his family, moved home to operate the family farm at Stewartstown R1.

Other members of the York Association's Board are E. Wayne Beshore, Ray Orner, Dwight Taylor, and Lynn Wolf.

Three new committees were appointed during the business meeting. They are: Dairy - Charles Rauhauser, Chairman, Thomas Boyer, Robert Smyser, Robert Stewart and Charles Hess; Livestock - Robert Luckenbaugh, Chairman, Jerry Rutter, Harold Gross and Dale Marstellar; Poultry - James Wolf, Chairman, Donald Flinchbaugh, Dwight Markey and Paul Musser.

At least seven delegates will represent York County at the 26th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association, Nov. 7-10, at the Sheraton International Inn, Gettysburg. The convention theme, "Power, Freedom, Advancement," is expected to draw about 1000 farm men and women from all parts of the state.

Young Farmers choose president

RED LION, Pa. - Clarence Godfrey, Glen Rock, R2, has been elected President of the Red Lion Area Young Farmers for the 1976-77 year. Other officers chosen were Roy Jackson, Felton R2, vice-president; Robert Burchett, Airville R1, secretary; Lester Holtzinger, Red Lion R2, treasurer; and Ellis Crowl, Airville R2, public relations.

A list of classes and activities scheduled for the Young Farmers has been released by the organization's advisor, John G. Myers. Subjects being covered during the winter classes include farm-business analysis records and income taxes, estate planning, marketing, and the Pesticide Applicators Certification Course.

Myers announced that three of the member families are participating in a new Young Farmer business aid, the Farm Business Management and Analysis Program. The records analysis program has been in use in Minnesota for 25 years and has now begun being used in 13 other states.

"A young farmer is anyone willing to learn," states Myers, a vo-ag teacher at the Red Lion High School, which sponsors the Young Farmer chapter. He encouraged all interested farm owners, managers, and agri-business employees to participate in the sessions, held Monday evenings, at 8:00 p.m. at the school. Wives, whom he emphasized are an important part of the effectiveness of farm programs, are encouraged to participate, also.

Sheep industry film receives award

DENVER, Colo. - The motion picture titled "The American Sheepman: A Way of Life" produced by the American Sheep Producers Council has received the Chris Bronze Plaque in the Columbus Film Festival, the oldest film festival in the United States.

The film, which stars Jim Davis and a number of sheep producers from across the country, is presently being distributed by Modern Talking Picture Service to schools, producer groups and television stations nationwide. To date, over four million people have viewed the 27½ minute film.

Phelan Productions of Denver, Colo., was responsible for direction and production of the semi-documentary. Original music was produced by the Great American Music Machine, also of Denver.

To obtain a copy of the film, contact Modern Talking Picture Service, 2323 New Hyde Park Rd., New Hyde Park, N.Y., 11040.

FFA queen chosen

RED LION, Pa. - The officers of the Red Lion FFA recently attended the York and Adams County Leadership Training Conference held at the York County Vocational Technical School. This conference was to inform the new officers of their duties and responsibilities in the local chapter. During the conference, the chapter quiz contest was held with the South Central Regional Vice-President, David Miller presiding. Lori Wolford from the Red Lion FFA, won this contest with Guy Sprague from Dover as runner-up. An annual event during this conference is the crowning of the FFA queen. This year the York and Adams County presidents crowned Ila McGregger from the Dover Chapter as queen and Camera Vickus of the Northern chapter as runner-up. The members, advisors, and guests present were given a special feature slide program by the Eshelman Studios entitled "America the Beautiful" at the conclusion of the program.

PUBLIC SALE

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE ANTIQUES

SATURDAY NOVEMBER 27, 1976

9:00 A.M.

To be held on the premises located at route 1, Lebanon, Lebanon County in both Heidelburg and Jackson Townships. Turn south off route 422 at Presscot at traffic light and continue appx. 3 miles to farm or turn west off route 501 in Reistwille and continue appx. 3 miles to farm.

99.76 ACRE FARM REAL ESTATE

This highly productive farm pictured below will sell at 1:00 P.M. on Nov. 27 with the terms being 10% down and the balance and settlement date to be announced at sale time by Attorney Louis Meyer. This farm has a very desirable location and is located in the very heart of the great Lebanon Valley.

Improvements consist of a large appx. 40' x 75' bank barn being of frame and stone construction with asbestos shingle roof and a small attached milk house. Barn was last used for a hog or beef fattening operation.

Other outbuildings consist of a 24' x 36' drive through a corn shed and implement storage building of frame construction with a slate roof. Also included is a very old stone hog sty which was recently featured in a local historical newsbook.

The large 2½ story brick house was built in 1855 by the late Henry Mase. First floor has a large kitchen, 2 living rooms which are adjoined by a large folding door, and a side room which has semi-bath facilities. Second floor has 4 bedrooms joined by a common hallway which also provides access to a large attic.

This home has a stonewall basement, spouting, outside entrance to basement, drilled well, old shutters and an attached 1½ story summer house building. If in need of some country property which has untold old features and many other interesting items, plan to attend open house on Nov. 6 from 10 to 4 o'clock or private inspection by calling John Mase at 717-933-4254, or Marvin Mase at 717-273-6583. These buildings are all very sound and structurally well built situated on very productive land so plan to attend and be the last to bid on this great investment opportunity.
